SAYS JAPAN WILL DEMAND BILLION DOLLARS AS WAR INDEMNITY

PEACE CRISIS COMES TO-DAY OVER THE JAP TERMS

M. WITTE, CHIEF RUSSIAN PEACE ENVOY, ENJOYING A CIGARETTE.

Fate of Conference Likely to Be Decided at To-day's Meeting, When Jap Envoys Are Expected to Outline What They Expect Russia to Concede.

Special to the Boston American.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 10.—A crisis in the peace negotiations between the Russian and Japanese envoys will be reached, it is believed, before to-day's sessions come to an end. The crucial moment will have arrived when the representatives of the Mikado make known to the envoys of the Czar the terms upon which the war may be ended.

These demands, it is believed, will either be so drastic that the Czar, through Witte, will peremptorily decline to discuss them at all or will offer hope for peace through a reasonable amelioration of their provisions.

Professor Tahasugi of the Imperial University of Tokio declared to-day Japan would demand a billion dollars indemnity, evacuation of Manchuria and cession of Sakhalin.

There are those here who have the impression that the Russians are in a rather pessimistic frame of mind to-day. The Russian and Japanese correspondents did not send out any very roseate stories to their home papers. But as a matter of fact, it is not believed that they know anything more about the real situation than any of the other newspaper men on the ground.

CREDENTIALS ALL RIGHT.

The envoys were half an hour late in getting together to-day for their first session. The first thing taken up was the matter of credentials. The Japanese envoys had seen the Russian credentials yesterday. The were all right, it is said. The Japanese presented theirs today. It is presumed that they, too, would be satisfactory. Both sets, it is believed, gave the envoys full powers to conclude a treaty of peace.

The matter of the demands of the Japanese, it is believed, will be taken up without delay. It is not thought that the question of an armistice would be broached at this early date of the proceedings or before the Russians knew what their enemy proposed in the way of putting an end to the fighting.

No official information was given out regarding the business to be taken up at today's session except that the formal presentation of credentials would be made. The arrangements for privacy bar newspaper men from the navy yard on an island seven miles from the hotel. Cards of admission to the grounds will not be issued during the period of negotiations, unless the pressure now being exerted for reasonable accommodations within the grounds causes Admiral Mead to reconsider his decision.

NO EXCHANGE MADE.

If Admiral Mead permits, the envoys

Searchers on Relief Steamer Terra Nova

FIND ZIEGLER PARTY

Antony Fiala and Expedition Are Saved, Except One Seaman, Who Has Died.

Steamer America Was Lost in the Ice in the Winter of 1903-'04.

HONNINGSVAAG, Norway, Aug. 10.—Anthony Fiala, the arctic explorer, and all other members of the Ziegler-Fiala arctic expedition except one seaman, have been rescued by the relief steamship, the Terra Nova. The one seaman who was not saved, died from natural causes.

The ship America, which took out the Ziegler-Fiala party, was crushed in the ice and lost. This happened early in the Winter of 1903-04. Not only was the ship lost, but a large part of the provisions was destroyed with it, also nearly all the coal.

JOY OVER REPORT OF FINDING THE EXPLORING PARTY

The news of the rescue of Fiala and his comrades comes only three days after the news from Shannon Island, coast of Greenland, that the other vessel, the Magdalina, had failed to find the explorers on Shannon Island.

It was thought that the explorers might be on Shannon Island or on Franz Josef land. When the report of the failure of the Shannon Island trip of the Magdalina came in, hope for the explorers went down greatly. To-day's cablegram from Norway, telling of the finding of the explorers in Franz Josef land, now ends the long anxiety felt for them.

Over Two Years Gone.

Anthony Fiala left on his venturesome voyage from Trondhjem, Norway, on June 23, 1903. The crew, under Captain Edwin Coffin of Martha's Vineyard, consisted of fourteen officers and men, but in the expedition altogether there were thirty-six men. Captain Coffin had seen twenty years of experience in the ice, and the two mates had chased whales in Arctic waters for fifteen years. All the crew were experienced whalers.

The America, of 470 tons, was the ship that conveyed the Ziegler expedition under Evelyn Briggs Baldwin, to Franz Josef Land in 1901. After her return from that expedition, in August, 1902, she was brought down from Tromsoe to Trondhjem, overhauled, cleaned, strengthened at vital points, given new decks and a very complete new equipment of electric dynamos.

200,000 GATHER TO HEAR THE PRESIDENT

ROOSEVELT TALKS TO MINERS AND TEMPERANCE HOST AT WILKESBARRE TO-DAY.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Aug. 10.—Over 80,000 mine workers who are in this city, and 80,000 more who cannot get here, are anxiously waiting to hear what President Roosevelt has to say in his speech this afternoon. Including the temperance workers, there are probably 200,000 visitors here. Many of the mine workers have brought their families and are camping out along the streets, determined to secure an advantageous position for seeing him if they cannot hear the speech. They will wait there until he makes his tour of the city late in the afternoon.

President John Mitchell of the Mine Workers' Union, who is to preside at the joint meeting of the miners and the Catholic Total Abstinence Union, which President Roosevelt is to address, says:

"I expect to see a great outpouring of the mine workers and the largest gathering of them in the history of the union. It will be a day long to be remembered, and is one of the most notable in the history of labor interests in the country."

Big Temperance Host.

The miners are hoping that the President, in his speech, will make a statement regarding the existing situation at the approaching expiration of the contract with the operators, and give them some advise on how to act in their efforts to secure a renewal of it and further concessions.

At noon to-day a host of temperance cadets and temperance soldiers in uniform, numbering over ten thousand, paraded the streets of the city. They will line up along the streets over which the President will pass to aid in guarding him. Every policeman and fireman in this city is on duty, and large forces of policemen from Scranton and other nearby towns have come to their aid. The streets over which the President drives have been roped off and every precaution taken to guard him. The President will arrive soon after 2 o'clock.

Many Notables Present.

All mines, factories and shops in the Wyoming Valley are idle, and business is suspended for the day.

Cardinal Gibbons, Mayor Weaver of Philadelphia, Judge W. J. Gibbons of Chicago, Congressmen, Senators, judges and church dignitaries from all parts of the country are here.

There was no session of the C. T. A. U. convention to-day. The delegates attended a requiem mass at St. Mary's Church.

JAPANESE FLEET IS SENT TO KAMCHATKA

SECOND SQUADRON IS ORDERED TO OKHOTSK ON THE COAST OF SIBERIA.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The correspondent of the Reuter Telegram Company at Tokio wires that Admiral Kataoka has dispatched one Japanese squadron toward the peninsula of Kamchatka, and another squadron to Okhotsk, on the Siberian coast.

The fleets have already started to carry out their orders, the nature of which has not been revealed.

Kamchatka is a peninsula in the northeast of Asia, attached to the Russian government of Primorsk. Its length is 850 miles, and its breadth, in the widest part, 280 miles. The population is estimated at 6,000. Winter lasts nine months of the year.

The exports comprise sable, fox and other skins, whale oil, fish and eggs. The imports are rice, flour, colonial goods and spirits. Trade is chiefly with Okhotsk.

Kamchatka was discovered and conquered by the Russians between 1696 and 1706.

PRAYED ALL NIGHT TO REVIVE DEAD HUSBAND BY CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

WIFE OF F. C. MOSELEY, KILLED BY LOCOMOTIVE, TRIED TO BRING HIM TO LIFE.

After spending the whole night in prayer beside his body, the wife of Frederick C. Moseley, the Neponset lumber merchant instantly killed by a train yesterday afternoon, today abandoned her belief that he was still alive and admitted that he was past her aid. Then Mrs. Moseley fell exhausted to the floor and is to-day confined to her room.

For thirteen hours Mrs. Moseley and the Christian Science healers called by her prayed over the body. Not until 5 o'clock did they give up their efforts to restore life to the crushed form. At that hour an undertaker was sent for and the sign of death hung at the door.

No statement will be made by any member of the family.

Westmoreland street, Dorchester's aristocratic neighborhood, where the Moseleys live in a magnificent mansion, is stirred over the strange proceedings. The body of Mr. Moseley was brought home in an undertaker's wagon after the wife had begged the police to let her have an ambulance, as she believed the conveying in the other would be an admission of death.

To all who questioned her she said:

"My Husband Still Lives."

"My husband is still alive."

Alfred Farlow, head of the publication committee of the First Church of Christ and a former president of the Church, says that Christian Scientists do not deny the fact of physical death.

"The question is absurd," said Mr. Farlow.

"I feel that there must be some mistake in the report that efforts have been made to restore Mr. Moseley to life if his friends really believe that he was dead. It seems much more reasonable to suppose that the Christian Science healers went to Mrs. Moseley's house merely to console with their sympathy, the same as any one's friends would do in affliction. If, however, it is really true that they have been endeavoring to revive him, it is probably because they have reason to believe that there is still life in him and the efforts at resuscitation would only be natural."

Mr. Moseley was pronounced dead by the first physician who reached the baggage room at the Neponset station, where the body of the lumber merchant was carried after it had been tossed thirty feet by the heavy engine. The merchant's skull was crushed. He had undoubtedly died instantly.

Mr. Moseley was very deaf, and did not hear the train. He also carried an umbrella in such a manner as to hide the approaching express from his view.

Christian Science Doctor Called.

He was picked up and taken into the baggage room, and was found to be dead. Mrs. Moseley arrived soon afterward and attempted to resuscitate her husband. She sent for a Christian Science doctor, and the two prayed and worked over the body, all to no avail.

The police of the Dorchester station were notified and Undertaker Gleason was ordered to take charge of the body and Medical Examiner MacDonald was notified.

The wife abhorred the thought of having her husband placed in an undertaker's wagon and appealed to Patrolman Gallagher and Murdoch for the use of the police ambulance to take the body of her husband home.

Permission was refused for the use of the ambulance, and after a four-hour wait, during which time the wife and Christian Science doctor worked almost unceasingly, Mrs. Moseley finally consented to permit her husband's body to be taken to her home, 14 Westmoreland street, Dorchester, by the undertaker.

Scientists Work on Body All Night.

Once the body had been taken inside the palatial residence, Mrs. Moseley renewed her efforts. When questioned about her husband, she said: "My husband is alive. He is not dead and I care nothing what the police have reported in the matter."

During the evening many Christian Scientists called at the Moseley residence.

Miss White, a sister-in-law of the dead man, said there were seven Christian Scientists working upon Mr. Moseley and that they had hopes. Just what these hopes were could not be learned.

Mr. Moseley was as ardent a Christian Scientist as was his wife. They regularly attended the First Church of Christ in Boston. To his friends Mr. Moseley often expressed regret that there was not a church in Neponset. He once said that he would give a large amount toward erecting a church in Neponset.

Married Six Years Ago.

He was twice married and had one son, Russell, aged seventeen years, by his first wife. The present Mrs. Moseley was formerly employed by him as a bookkeeper. They were married six years ago, and about that time Mrs. Moseley became interested in the teachings of Christian Science.

Mr. Moseley was about forty-six years of age.

NIECES LOSE IN $50,000 WILL FIGHT

Mrs. Cora Putney and Mrs. Daniel Rowe of Somerville have lost their contest of the will of their uncle, Thomas R. Weaver of Springfield, who left an estate of nearly $50,000. The bulk of the property was bequeathed to his second wife. Judge Long decided that Weaver was sound in mind when he made the will.

SHREWD MOVE IN GREAT GAME OF DIPLOMACY

Mikado's Representative Offers to Send for His Papers After Leaving Them at Hotel.

SORRY AT "OVERSIGHT"

By J. Frank Davis.

THE WENTWORTH, Newcastle, N. H., Aug. 10.—Japan won the first point in the game of diplomacy now being played at the Portsmouth Navy Yard. Wily old Baron Komura read the Russian credentials yesterday forenoon. The Russians did not see his until to-day. It was officially given out that Komura, depending upon the informality of the first meeting, neglected to take his credentials to the meeting, that he expressed his sorrow at the oversight and offered to send for them, and that M. Witte, who had already passed his credentials to Komura, said he would be satisfied with a verbal statement of their contents.

This is very pretty and courteous, but it must occur to everyone who has ever heard of the tortuous methods of diplomacy, especially Oriental diplomacy, that it is extremely improbable that there was any accident at all in the happening.

When the first day's session ended, the Japanese knew exactly what powers are possessed by the envoys of the Czar. The Russians had not seen even the glimmer of a single imperial seal. One might suppose the Japs had made up their minds to await their view of the Russian credentials and then, if a trap were suspected such as was laid for Japan in the Chinese negotiations, to follow the exact form of the suspicious sentences in their own documents.

The few men well informed in the tricks of diplomacy who thoughtfully considered the credential incident are raising such suppositions as this to-day.

It does not appear what the Japanese had to gain by their action, more than that it enabled them to see the first of their opponents' cards before they saw theirs.

Nothing is more important than the proper form of credentials, as the Japanese learned when, after they had given their terms to the Chinese, at the end of the Chino-Japanese war, they found the Chinese were not empowered to close peace arrangements and were humliated by having their demands used as an excuse for the intervention of the European powers.

DIAMOND CUT DIAMOND.

"It was just such diplomacy as Russia herself is constantly playing," said a man whose knowledge of diplomacy has been wide, to me last evening. "The Russians probably realized it themselves after the incident was over."

M. Korostovetz said the idea of this being a point for the Japanese was "all nonsense."

Mr. Sato also deprecated the idea, saying: "Komura didn't expect M. Witte would have his credentials. That is all there is to it."

There was slightly more fraternizing among the envoys of the two nations last night than previously. They are becoming more acquainted. Representatives in the reception room together during the evening as they passed recognized each other by profound bows. The only instance of public conversation between the representatives of the two nations was when Lieutenant Commander Takashita, naval attache at Washington, talked for ten minutes on the piazza with Secretary Nobakoff of the Russian commission.

While they were talking Baron Komura and Mr. Takahira came out upon the veranda and stood for five minutes taking the air. They stopped within two feet of M. Nobakoff, who, after a second or two, unobtrusively said good night and went into the reception room.

The evening scene in the reception hall and palm room was very brilliant. The Tenth Artillery Band, ordered here from Fort Banks at the request of Assistant Secretary Peirce, gave a concert on the piazza, alternating with the hotel orchestra, which played for a hop in the ball room. The guests were out in force, and many of the Russians with their wives, attracted by the music, came over from their wing.

Neither M. Witte nor Baron Rosen was in evidence all the evening. It was a subject of comment that the Russian envoys did not take dinner last night in the public dining room, but had the meal served in their own apartments. Komura and Takashira ate in the public dining room.

BUREAU OF PUBLICITY.

The two admirable gentlemen who have been selected to give out to the scores of newspaper correspondents the news of the two commissions have evidently been selected for their ability to talk English—without disseminating information. Their utterances to this moment have been courteous, intelligent and interesting—but hardly important. A list of clerks, a statement that nothing has been done but something some time may be, a piece of information as to the opinion of the informant as to the beauty of the American women who throng the hotel o' nights, diamond-bespangled—this is the principal result, to date, of the efforts to interview the official news announcers.

Mr. A. Sato is the second clerk of the Japanese commission. Educated in this country, he speaks English fluently and with little accent. M. George Korostovetz is the first clerk of the Russian commission. He speaks English as fluently as Mr. Sato, but with a pronounced Parisian accent. Each has thus far been extremely courteous. Each, however, has developed an interesting habit of sending to all the correspondents word that an official statement is to be issued in a little while, and supplementing it, a few hours later, by the explanation that "a little while" is a phrase employed in the Pickwickian sense, actually meaning some time to-morrow afternoon or evening.

It has been a source of some surprise to the throngs in the hotel that the representatives of the two nations circulate so freely among the guests, and maintain so democratic an attitude. This is even more true of the Japanese than of the Russians. The attaches of the Japanese party sit on the piazzas and smoke, frequently, and even Baron Komura himself spent a few moments in the common reception hall of the hotel yesterday afternoon.

SOCIETY CHARMED.

Society is charmed with the foreigners. Matrons and maids view them with longing eyes and hope for introductions—usually without avail—and the desire of the Summer girls to make the acquaintance of the titled foreigners has led to some amusing incidents. One took place in the afternoon in the hotel reception room.

A Summer girl came into the room with a tiny puppy, a well-bred Boston terrier she had just purchased. A handsome Japanese, well-dressed and intelligent, sat upon a divan. She rushed up to him.

"I know you will excuse me," she gushed, "but I would esteem it such an honor if you would name my little dog."

The Japanese rose and bowed profoundly. "I am honored, miss," he said. "will name him Togo."

The girl was delighted. She told all the girls in her set her new dog had been named by a member of the Japanese envoys' party? The nice-looking young Japanese was Lieutenant-Commander Takashita.

During the afternoon a pair of traveling trick bicycle riders visited the hotel and gave an entertainment on the broad drive in front of the main piazza. A hundred or two guests witnessed it, and the auditors included a number of minor members of the peace parties.

The envoys are a modest collection of men, and make no fuss as they go about the place. There is, however, a head porter, much uniformed and filled with pride of power. During the entertainment the porter crossed the drive between the audience and the bicyclists, one of whom was a very clever comedian of the "Rube" variety. The porter was dressed as gorgeously as usual, and walked with some pomp and circumstance.

ENVOYS HONEST MEN.

"Gee!" called out the comedian, looking at the porter and talking to his audience. "There goes one of the plenipotentiaries." Nothing that has happened since the week began has aroused so general a laugh.

The envoys themselves make no attempt at display. Neither party wears orders or insignia. There is very little of the picturesque in the gathering. A dash of color was injected, yesterday, when Captains Gibbon and Winslow of the Dolphin and Mayflower came to pay a call upon the envoys. They were in full dress, and the gorgeous gold braid and epaulets made a bright centre to the circle of admirers by whom they were surrounded as they stood waiting a response to the sending up of their cards.

The Japanese evince an intention to work hard while their duties last, and take their recreation, if any they purpose to get out of the trip, after peace has been declared. Beyond a drive in the afternoon, neither Komura nor Takahira have taken any recreation since arriving here.

Everyone was surprised at the length of the sessions decided upon yesterday. It had not been believed that the envoys would meet for longer than three hours a day. The information, first given out by Mr. Takahira yesterday afternoon, that they had agreed to sit from 9:30 to 12:30 each morning, and from 3 to 5:30 or 6 each afternoon, was unexpected.

ALL WORK AT NAVY YARD.

This is taken to mean that the conferences of the separate parties will not be held in their suites at the hotel, as had been anticipated, but in their special rooms at the navy yard, where they have every facility for work, including cable connections, and where they are absolutely free from interruption or even an attempt to penetrate their secrecy.

When Mr. Sato said yesterday that Japan's peace terms would be made public on the day that the treaty of peace was signed, he expressed what seems to be the Japanese intention as to the publicity attending the envoys' efforts. He supplemented his statement later by saying that it was the envoys' intention to have him give out, daily, any matters that they deemed it proper for the public to know.

Automobiles and launches—the latter flying the flags of Russia and Japan—were ready for the starting of the trip to the navy yard to-day, the same as yesterday. This, according to Assistant Secretary of State Peirce, will be the daily programme, and the public will never know which way the envoys are to travel. This will minimize any chance of assault by Anarchists upon the visitors.

COSSACKS IN FIGHT WITH MUTINEERS OF RUSSIAN REGIMENT

BERLIN, Aug. 10.—The Schlesische Zeitung says that 150 men of the Volhyn Regiment at Warsaw, Poland, refused to obey orders to entrain preparatory to starting for the Far East. All the mutineers were sentenced to death for their refusal.

Later this sentence was commuted, and every tenth man was ordered shot. A company of Lithuanians were ordered to execute the men, but the company refused to fire on the condemned soldiers. A regiment of Cossacks was summoned immediately by telephone, and a fight ensued, in which both sides suffered severe losses. Another infantry regiment was then summoned, and the Lithuanians were compelled to surrender.

The further proceedings were conducted behind the walls of the citadel, and secrecy is observed as to what occurred.

RUSSIAN ARMY UNIT FOR WAR--ROUSSINE

HOTEL WENTWORTH, Newcastle, N. H., Aug. 10.—"The Russian army is a unit for the continuation of the war," declared Commander A. Roussine, recently chief naval adviser to General Linevich, who has just joined M. Witte's staff.

M. Roussine arrived direct from St. Petersburg via New York. He was confident that the American people greatly misunderstood the reported disorders in his country.

"The great majority of the people are contented and happy," said he. "You hear of a few outbreaks, but you hear nothing of the millions who are satisfied with their lot. The Russians as a whole are as loyal to the Czar as you are to your Government.

"If a vote of the army were taken it would be for a prolongation of the conflict."

WITTE TO CZAR---JAP TERMS ACCEPTABLE

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 10.—It is reported that M. Witte has telegraphed the Czar that he already knows the Japanese terms, and that they are acceptable with a few amendments. He believes that Japan will agree to the changes which he will propose.

As a result government officials now take a more optimistic view of the outcome of the peace negotiations which are in progress at Portsmouth, and it is noticeable that they are hopeful that the war will be brought to an end.

ENVOYS IN SECOND DAY CONFERENCE

will arrange that a brief statement of the morning's session's business be sent half a mile to the navy yard gate and posted for the information of the newspaper men.

The report that the protocols of yesterday's conference were exchanged at the Hotel Wentworth at 1 o'clock this morning between M. Sato for the Japanese and M. Nabokoff for the Russians, is authoritatively denied. M. Karastovec, the spokesman for the Russian party, pointed out that there was no formal meeting of the envoys yesterday, and that therefore no protocols were drawn up.

The Russians again delayed the proceedings to-day so that the envoys, instead of getting together at 9:30 as was intended, did not begin work until nearly half an hour later. In leaving the hotel to-day there was a verbal clash between Secretary Korostovetz and Assistant Secretary of State Peirce as to the manner of taking the Russian secretaries to the Navy Yard that indicated the emissaries of the Czar were not in the best of humor today.

Seven or eight of the Japanese secretaries got away from the hotel before 9 o'clock. They were the first members of the peace body to appear. They made the trip in a tally-ho. A few minutes later Minister Takahira and Baron Komura, accompanied by Mr. Sato, appeared. They got into an automobile and whizzed away. That was 9:10.

Ten minutes later the Russian secretaries appeared on the veranda of the hotel. In the party of half a dozen were Korostovetz and Nobakoff. Assistant Secretary Peirce was on the Russian end of the hotel to greet them. Yesterday Mr. Peirce appeared on the Japanese end. Mr. Peirce told the Russian secretaries that their tally-ho was waiting. They hurried to it, a couple of the members carrying large portfolios.

PEIRCE WAS FIRM.

In a moment Korostovetz returned to the hotel veranda and, addressing Secretary Peirce, said:

"We have been informed by the driver of the tally-ho that it will take about three-quarters of an hour to reach the navy yard. That is too long. We must get there more quickly."

"I am afraid that is the best way we have at our disposal," said Mr. Peirce.

"But we can't get there in time," persisted the Russian, somewhat impatiently.

"Well," said Mr. Peirce suggestively, "the tally-ho has been waiting for you since 8:30."

"We'll go in the launch."

"I'm sorry, but there is no launch—it was ordered back when you decided to go in the tally-ho."

"We have got to go some other way—this is too slow."

Mr. Peirce smiled. Then he bowed slowly and said very firmly:

"I very much fear that the tally-ho is the only vehicle we can provide for you this morning."

BOWS FOR EVERYBODY.

The Russian apparently became impressed with the fact that he had to take the tally-ho or get another conveyance himself, and he bowed very low, smiled and—returned to the tally-ho and got aboard.

It was 9:20 when M. Witte and Baron Rosen appeared. They got into the auto that was awaiting them after they had shaken hands with a few score of people promiscuously on the veranda, among whom were a number of newspaper men who were apparently taken for somebody else, and were hurried away with uncovered heads and in the act of bowing to everybody in sight.

To-day it is reported here that Witte knows by a cablegram from the Czar that all of the Imperial advisers but two have voted to end the war on the best terms possible. This, with the fact that a majority voted in favor of Witte's own advice as to the payment of an indemnity, leads members of the Russian Embassy to believe that peace is not only possible, but probable, as a result of the present conference.

SENTIMENT AIDS PEACE.

Baron Komura is aware of the fact that Witte is empowered with plenary authority to conclude peace. In fact, the Russian chief envoy was particularly anxious to impress upon the Mikado's representative that his powers were as complete as could be wished. And on the strength of this condition of affairs the Japanese, also, see brighter prospects for peace within a very short time.

JAPS FLOAT VARIAG, DISABLED IN THE CHEMULPO FIGHT

TOKIO, Aug. 10.—The imperial navy department has announced the successful floating of the cruiser Variag Tuesday afternoon. In view of the difficulty encountered, there is a strong feeling of general satisfaction over the raising of the vessel.

The Russian cruiser Variag and the Russian gunboat Korietz were sunk by the Russians after being disabled by the Japanese in battle in the harbor of Chemulpo on Feb. 9, 1904.

REJECT OFFER OF LAWSON TO BURY UNCLE

Nephews Learn of Suicide of Former Partner of the Copper King.

CEREMONY WAS SIMPLE

Two nephews of Professor A. A. Woodbridge, once a business partner of Thomas W. Lawson, whose body was washed ashore at Cohasset after he had committed suicide, refused to accept the offer of Mr. Lawson to defray the burial expenses.

They learned of the identification of the body only after Mr. Lawson had come forward. Immediately they notified the copper king that they would take charge of the remains and bear all expenses.

Professor Woodbridge was buried at Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset. Rev. William R. Cole, pastor of the First Unitarian Church, conducted the brief burial service, with only the nephews, an undertaker and the grave digger as attendants.

Three detained immigrants were deported on the steamship Republic, which sailed for England to-day. Two were women in delicate health and the third was a Swiss boy who had intended to go to Utah, but found no friend awaiting him.

POLICE USE CLUBS IN NEW YORK BREAD RIOTS

CHARGE MOB THAT IS TRAMPLING LOAVES IN MUD, AND MANY PERSONS ARE HURT.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The bread riots of the East Side reached their climax last night. Midnight found the streets in the affected section filled with thousands of frenzied men and women, who stoned shops, attacked wagons containing kosher bread sent from Hoboken and Philadelphia and trampled the loaves in the street.

Scores were clubbed by the police all during the day and evening and sought drug stores to have their wounds dressed. Arrests were of momentary occurrence, and damage done to wrecked shops was estimated in the thousands of dollars.

Several wagon loads of kosher bread that had been sent to the city from Philadelphia, to be sold for twenty-five cents a loaf to the poor Jews whose bakers have struck for less hours and better treatment, entered the territory of the strikers. The wagons were demolished and their contents trampled in the mud of the streets.

Police Charged Mob.

At an early hour a woman rushed into the hall of the strikers in Clinton street, shouting that there were wagons outside with bread. In an instant the street was crowded.

A dozen men made a rush for the wagons, were joined by scores of others, and in the twinkling of an eye the wagons were overturned, the bread scattered in the street and the drivers forced to seek shelter. Not a striker touched the bread with his lips, but thousands trampled the loaves in the street.

The police forced their way through the crowds, beating back all who tried to remain and arresting all who offered resistance. Reinforced by reserves, the bluecoats forced back the crowds and kept the streets clear for a while, but their efforts to restore order were of littlt avail, for, as soon as the officers disappeared, the crowds regathered and listened to speeches made by the strikers and their sympathizers.

A policeman stood at the door of every bakeshop from the Bowery to the East River and from Houston to Munroe street.

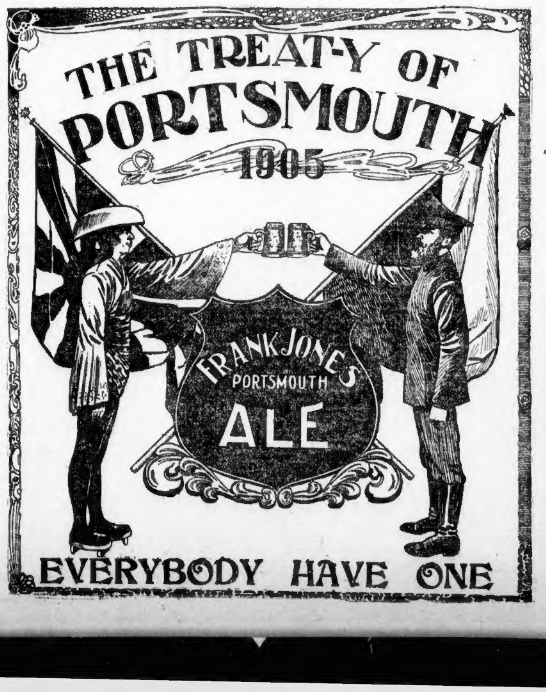
Price 16 Cents a Loaf.

From four cents a loaf the staple has risen to sixteen cents, with a probability that it will go still higher as the strike continues.

Fifty striking bakers went to the shop of Jacob Bock, No. 138 Orchard street, and attempted to force their way in. They were met with violent resistance and a fight ensued, in which Policeman Sofsky engaged one of the most violent of the mob, grabbing him by the collar and dragging him toward the station.

He landed his man after a succession of desperate fights with the mob, in which he used his night stick freely and was badly battered himself.

A special committee will call upon Acting Mayor Fornes to-day to present the side of the striking bakers and ask his protection from the hoodlums who attack them and foment trouble.



SECOND ROMANTIC MARRIAGE FOR BEAUTIFUL WIDOW WITH $8,000,000

MRS. BATES OF BACK BAY WED TO ENGLISHMAN

Was Former Husband's Cook, Now Gives Her Hand to British Naval Officer.

MET HIM IN BERMUDA

When the pretty cook of a Back Bay millionaire stepped from the kitchen into a fortune of $8,000,000, and thence into an assured social position, Boston society was amazed. This metamorphosis resulted from the marriage to the late John D. Bates of pretty Miss Mary Clarkin of the North of Ireland, for thirteen years employed in his kitchen.

Now this same woman, a widow for four years, has again startled society. This time it is by her secret marriage to Captain Henry F. FitzRoy, late of the British battleship, Charybdis. They were married several days ago but it only became known to-day. They are spending their honeymoon at Centre Harbor, N. H.

CHAPTER I.

Forty-one years ago at Clones, in the north of Ireland, Mary Clarkin was born. From childhood she was singularly beautiful, and as she ripened into womanhood the promise of her early life was more than fulfilled. The dark hair and blue eyes of her native blood combined charmingly, and in poise and figure she became the most attractive women in the north of Ireland.

The Clarkins were not wealthy, yet they were of an excellent strain of blood. For several years the girl lived at home, surrounded by her immediate family, two of whom, Kataleen and Margaret, were almost as beautiful as she was.

After awhile a swain of Ireland came to woo. His name was O'Carroll. He, too, was of the north of Ireland, and was a playmate of Mary. They were together a great deal, then the friendship of childhood ripened into love, at least on his part. He asked for Mary's hand in marriage.

It was about this time, for some reason, Mary Clarkin decided to come to America. It might have been due to a petty disagreement with this lover of her childhood. No one ever knew definitely. Anyway there came a day when she told him good-bye and sailed aboard a big ship for the United States.

CHAPTER II.

America brought home to the pretty colleen the necessity of earning her own livelihood. At home she had been deft and handy at all things, particularly in the kitchen. Once here she decided to adopt the kitchen as a permanent vocation, and then the problem of finding a good place presented itself.

For days she sought everywhere for a place, then at last her attention was attracted by an advertisement in a paper, which stated that a bachelor of Back Bay desired a woman to take charge of his kitchen. Mary Clarkin answered the advertisement, going to No. 161 Commonwealth avenue. There lived John D. Bates, a millionaire of middle age.

The girl went to work. For several weeks she remained there in the kitchen before she ever saw her master. One day she did see him by accident. He saw her at the same time. He stopped and spoke to her, and admired the beauty of the girl.

After awhile it came to pass that he took more notice of her than formerly. Then in some strange way in which love moves he asked her to become his wife. It was the opening of the gates of fairyland to the pretty girl of the kitchen. She consented, and quietly one day they were married by a Catholic priest.

CHAPTER III.

Society was amazed at the announcement which was made through the press that John D. Bates, presumably almost a woman hater, had been married, and to a girl of the kitchen. Mr. Bates and the bride said nothing, they were happy together. But after awhile the question of whether or not Mrs. Bates should be received in society was raised.

There was a great deal of bickering and some heart burning, but she was received. Gradually it came at first, then when the full charm and beauty of the woman became known, society opened its arms to her. She became prominent in social affairs, particularly at bazaars and in a charitable way, giving freely of the $8,000,000 which she shared with her husband. Many of her gifts went to Catholic institutions.

Then for years Mrs. Bates reigned in her beautiful home on Commonwealth avenue, and took large parties to her handsome country estate, "The Briars," at Centre Harbor, N. H. Her husband, devoted and admiring always, gave her absolute freedom in her social campaigns, and she was a success from almost the start.

Then her husband's health began to fail. He died in 1900, being sixty years old at that time. The fortune of $8,000,000 was left wholly to his charming widow. For three years she was in deep mourning.

CHAPTER IV.

About eighteen months ago Mrs. Bates, still in half-mourning, met Captain Henry F. FitzRoy of His Majesty's service at Bermuda, where she had gone for a brief rest before entering again upon the social life of Boston. At that time Captain FitzRoy was open in his avowal of admiration for the beautiful and wealthy widow.

Perhaps it might be that Mrs. Bates listened then, but anyway she returned to the United States and there was nothing known of the brief romance to her friends, or to society. But before she returned she invited Captain FitzRoy to be her guest some time at Centre Harbor, and this offer he accepted.

It was about a year ago that Mrs. Bates was again the centre of the public eye, by the fact that she was the victim of a diamond theft. Jewels valued at $5,500 disappeared from her home, "The Briars," and a reward of $500 was offered for their return. There were many pieces of value to her because they were her husband's gifts.

But the search of the police for the jewels was unavailing, and finally it trailed off into inactivity. It was about this time that Captain FitzRoy had a vacation and came to accept Mrs. Bates's hospitality at Centre Harbor. He remained there for several weeks as her guest, meeting her friends. Again, perhaps, he told her of his love, without avail.

CHAPTER V.

Immediately after Captain FitzRoy ended his vacation and went away, leaving his heart in the keeping of the beautiful widow, there followed a horde of suitors. Mrs. Bates still possessed all that striking beauty of her girlhood, only it was more mature, more complete, and she was the object of adoration by half a dozen men.

It was about this time that her correspondence with Captain FitzRoy grew to be a part of her life. She ignored others, but she waited eagerly and with flushed face the letters of the naval officer who had been her guest. They came from every port, and at last the one he had been expecting reached him.

Then it was that Captain FitzRoy resigned from the British Navy and journeyed to England to tell his family of his good fortune. They approved, and finally he came back to this country to claim the widow as his bride. He went again to the Centre Harbor estate and remained there for a week or so. Then arrangements for the fortheoming wedding were made.

CHAPTER VI.

It was within the week that Mrs. Bates and Captain FitzRoy, one of the handsomest men in the British Navy, came down to Boston from New Hampshire. Together they went to St. Cecilia's Catholic Church on Belvidere street, and there Father O'Keefe performed the ceremony which made the widow a wife again.

Miss Margaret Clarkin, a sister of the bride, was the maid of honor, and Malcolm McKinnon, brother-in-law of the bride, was best man. Other than those of the two immediate families were present. None of the relatives of John D. Bates were present, although their names stand for the highest in Boston society.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom left Boston for "The Briars," where they are at present. Their honeymoon will be spent there, and later perhaps they will go abroad, where the bride will be presented to the immediate family of her husband.

Now it is said that Mrs. FitzRoy will give another substantial sum to the church she is building at Centre Harbor, "Our Lady of Victory," as a token of her happiness. After the return of the couple to Boston it is probable that the social obligations which the bride as a widow shirked will be again taken up.

Wealthy Back Bay Widow Who Has Become Bride of a British Naval Officer.

GIGANTIC FRAUDS IN INSURANCE

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Colossal swindles, perpetrated under a thin pretext of a formal compliance with law, representing fraudulent fire insurance in force aggregating $55,000,000, are charged against various pretended corporations which are now exploiting in Buffalo, and nearly all the counties of the western and southern part of New York, what is alleged to be a most nefarious fraud.

Five weeks ago information was laid before Attorney-General Mayer to the effect that there was a clique of men in Buffalo who since 1901 had built up pa mill for the manufacture of bogus insurance companies; that names were selected closely resembling universally known companies whose policies were closely imitated, and canvassers sought and wrote insurance in these companies; that as soon as a loss occurred the company went into the hands of a receiver, and other companies of the same character entered the field; that in this manner companies were incorporated faster than the courts could wreck them.

Attorney-General Mayer has designated Deputy Attorney-General George F. Slocum of Rochester to act as special representative of the State in a general pprosecution against this industry.

NO LAW COVERS ATTEMPT TO BRIBE COLLINS

Offer of Money to C. L. U. Chief in Dock Permit Matter Not a Crime.

SUGHRUE TO BE CONSULTED

While the Central Labor Union has engaged counsel to criminally prosecute the man who is said to have offered money to President Peter W. Collins to influence labor in favor of the National Dock Trust track permit, it is doubtful if success attends their efforts. There seems to be no law in Massachusetts making it a crime to attempt to bribe a labor leader.

The active counsel for the Central Labor Union and Collins is Thomas A. Mullen of No. 15 State street, counsel for the People's Securities Company, which has taken charge of the affair. Mr. Mullen said to-day in this connection:

"If we find there is no law making it a criminal action to attempt to bribe a labor official, then President Collins and the labor leaders cognizant of the attempts at bribery will make affidavits to the facts they know and these will be published broadcast in the newspapers.

"The public pillory is the place for this man and he will go there if we can't get him through a court."

Further, Mr. Mullen, speaking of what he intends to do in the matter, said:

"I shall go to the District Attorney as counsel for President Collins and will lay before Mr. Sughrue the same facts which the Central Labor Union committee laid before him, asking his opinion as to how to proceed."

"Will you, during your talk with Mr. Sughrue, lay before him the name of the man charged with attempting to bribe Mr. Collins?" he was asked.

"I will," was the reply. "I will do this as counsel for Mr. Collins, and upon the statement of Mr. Collins, which, if necessary, I will make into an affidavit."

President Collins will make a full statement either this afternoon or to-morrow as to the connection of the Central Labor Union with the charges which have been made of bribery and attempted bribery. Meanwhile it is understood that the man accused by President Collins has engaged counsel.

WOULD LIKE TO PROSECUTE BRIBE ACCUSER

Aldermen Hennessey and Clark, two of the men charged by Alderman Linehan with having been bribed to favor the National Dock Trust petition, have called on District-Attorney Sughrue in an effort to find out whether there is any way to prosecute Linehan for criminal libel. It is understood that they received little satisfaction, being told that the remarks of Linehan on the floor of the Aldermanic Chamber were privileged.

Regarding this visit Alderman Clark says:

"I don't suppose that there is anything that we can do in the matter. I haven't replied to Alderman Linehan's charges, as I do not consider them worthy of attention.

"It seems to me that it is now up to Alderman Linehan to prove what he charges."

Alderman Hennessey said: "I don't feel that I am at liberty to discuss our visit to District Attorney Sughrue. You must get your information from the district attorney."

Alderman Linehan said: "I am not a lawyer, but I know when I made the charges that I did that I was well within my legal rights."

HUMIDITY GETS IN ITS WORK

It seems warm to-day, not because the temperature is unusually high, but owing to excessive humidity. Eighty per cent. is the humidity figure, which is ten above normal.

The temperature at 10 o'clock was also eighty. The lowest during the night was 71 at 4 o'clock. The lowest in New England was sixty at Eastport.

During the night there were heavy showers in several places in New England.

The weather forecaster says it may be a little warmer and partly cloudy to-night and to-morrow. Southwest winds will prevail.

MISS TUCKER IS RAPIDLY IMPROVING

EAST ROCHESTER, N. H., Aug. 10.—All doubt that Miss Mary Tucker will entirely recover from the effects of her thirteen days' wandering is now felt by the physicians to be over. Miss Tucker shows every sign of rapidly regaining her shattered strength. Her father remains here and spends much of his time with his daughter. As yet nothing has been learned of the woman's story, he is not inclined to talk, and her friends fear to excite her by their questions.

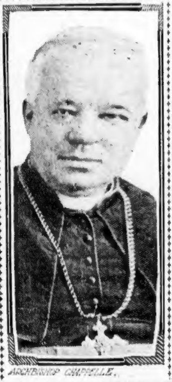
PRELATE'S DEATH FROM FEVER LEADS TO PANIC



Prelate Victim of Yellow Fever.

Noted Prelate's Last Words on Fever Plague

The result is appalling.—

Last words of His Eminence Archbishop Placide Louis Chappelle, victim of yellow fever.

New Orleans Populace in Frenzy and Officials Have to Use Restraint.

Special to the Boston American.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 10.—The people who have been frightened at the yellow fever epidemic are panic-stricken now. The death of Archbishop Chapelle, the distinguished prelate, whose presence here has been the city's pride, and who kept the people's courage up by his personal work and words of good cheer, has now thrown the people into a frenzy of fear. Aside from the tremendous work of suppressing the disease, the authorities now have the more momentous work of holding in check and reassuring the terror-stricken populace.

Many Imagine Disease.

As long as the impression was current that the archbishop was doing well and probably recovering, this frenzy was kept down and allayed. Now it has broken out anew and scores of these frantic people imagine they have contracted the dread disease when they have not.

Fright in a time of this kind, the doctors say, is more fatal than the yellow fever itself.

The Federal government is in full control of the fever situation. Surgeon White, who is at the head of the Marine Hospital service at this point, has taken formal charge of a new set of offices tendered to him in the Louisiana National Bank building. The work of fighting the fever will be directed hereafter from that point.

64 Deaths in 24 Hours.

Surgeon Blue and Assistant Surgeons F. C. Smith and E. M. Steger, of Surgeon White's staff, have reported for duty. Several other army surgeons who are experts in yellow fever, will report here before the end of the week. Dr. Paul Gessner, a local physician, has been placed in charge of the local sanitarium work with a staff of five assistants.

The result of the holiday for general cleaning purposes was that thousands of barrels and boxes of rubbish were removed. The cleaning was so thorough that it will take several days to haul the rubbish away.

Now cases reported in the past twenty-four hours total sixty-four. The depression caused by Archbishop Chapelle's death is still keenly felt. The cathedral was crowded to the doors this morning when solemn mass of requiem was sung over the prelate's body. The masses will be repeated to-morrow and Saturday, when the body will be interred in the crypt of the cathedral.

CARDINAL GIBBONS SHOCKED AT DEATH OF ARCHBISHOP

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Aug. 10.—Cardinal Gibbons, speaking about the death of Bishop Chappelle, said:

"The news is a great shock to me. I had no idea the end was so near. I need not say how much I am shocked. Before leaving Baltimore this morning I received a dispatch from Archbishop Chappelle commending himself to my prayers. This was the first news I had that he was dangerously ill. I am deeply grieved by the news of his death."

GLOUCESTER SHIP ASHORE; CREW SAVED

Special to the Boston American.

GLOUCESTER, Aug. 10.—A telegram received here to-day announced that the fishing schooner Mina Swim was ashore at Wood Harbor, N. S. Captain John Swim who sent the message gave no other details save that the schooner was after bait. The crew was saved.

JEWS SLAIN BY MOB NEAR KISHINEFF

City of Rishkahn Demolished as Result of Anti-Semitic Riots.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Advices from Russian revolutionists at Rishkahn, Bessarabia, state that the entire city is in ruins as the result of an anti-Semitic riot in which a large number of Russian Jews were killed and hundreds severely injured. A number of the anti-Semitic rioters also received severe injuries. The houses of the Jews were invaded, furniture broken and the inmates killed or beaten.

The mob, not content with venting its fury by the killing and injuring of its unfortunate victims, pulled down and demolished the houses of the Jews.

The entire city of Rishkahn, which was inhabited mostly by Jews, is now in a state of complete demolition. The city looks as if a terrible tornado had struck it, and many of its unfortunate inhabitants have been compelled to flee to other cities.

Rishkahn is situated in the vicinity of Kishineff.

BIG GASOLENE BOAT LAUNCHED

The Tonopah, the largest gasolene boat ever built in Boston, owned by J. S. Anderson of Philadelphia, was launched from the shipyard of George Lawley & Son, South Boston, to-day.

She is 88 feet long, 14 feet beam and has a 240-horse power gasolene engine, which drives twin screws. She is expected to make twenty knots an hour.

On next Tuesday, under Captain Edward Fuhr and a crew of five men, she will start on a Summer cruise along the South Shore.

BABY'S RAW SCALY HUMOR

Intense Suffering for Two Years—Had Several Doctors and Tried Everything, but in Spite of All Terrible Sores Kept Spreading.

CURED BY CUTICURA AT COST OF 75 CENTS

"My sister had a terrible humor on her shoulder when she was eighteen months old, causing intense suffering for two years. We had several doctors, and tried everything, but in spite of all we did it kept spreading. One day it would scab over and then crack open and a watery matter ooze from it and the scabs would all fall off. It would be raw for a time, then scab over again. Some one recommended Cuticura, and we immediately procured a box of Cuticura Ointment, and a cake of Cuticura Soap. She was much better after the first bath with warm water and soap, and an application of the Ointment. Before it was half gone we saw a marked change for the better, and she was entirely cured, without a scar being left, by the one box of Ointment and one cake of Soap. Her skin is now entirely clear, and she has not had a sign of trouble since. (signed) Mrs. L. C. Walker, 5 Tremont Street, Woodfords, Me., Aug. 15, 1904."

ANOTHER CURE

"I had sores on my face for four years. I used many remedies but received no benefit until I used Cuticura. I have not been troubled with the sores since.—Gracie Buzzell, Etna, Me., May 15, '05."

AND STILL ANOTHER

"I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for falling hair and dandruff and found them very beneficial. I am never without them. (signed) Miss A. M. [illegible]eley, Box 57, Worcester, Mass., [illegible]il 14, '05."

SLAYER WANTS MONEY SENT TO DESERTED WIFE

George F. Morris, Held for Murder, Offered $1,000 for Aid to End Life.

ONE ATTEMPT WAS FOILED

LOWELL, Aug. 10.—Remorse has stricken George F. Morris, held on the charge of murder of Mrs. Jennie Spalding, to whom he is said to have been illegally married.

Discovered in an effort to commit suicide by biting an artery in his arm, he has commenced to realize his condition and desires that something be done for the wife and daughter he deserted in Laconia, N. H.

Morris had about $1,000 with him when arrested, the savings of some years. First he offered it to his guards for assistance in ending his life. When they refused to accept it he asked that the money be sent to his wife.

Jennie Spalding quarrelled with Morris because of his attentions to other women. She declared on the day of the tragedy that she was going to leave him.

The autopsy on Mrs. Spalding's body showed three bullet wounds, all in or above the right ear, passing through the skull and any one of them would have been fatal. The fourth shot fired at the woman has not been found. The body will be buried by her sisters, Mrs. Davey and Mrs. Stewart, to-morrow, at Tyngsboro, where her father's remains lie.

It develops that Morris and Mrs. Spalding were married in Lawrence in May by a justice of the peace, but that Mrs. Spalding very soon after learned that Morris had a wife living from whom he had not been divorced. Nevertheless they continued to live together, each jealous of the other and continually quarrelling. It is learned that he had employed a Lowell private detective to watch her.

$6,000 LOST A YEAR IS FOUND

An honest riveter in the employ of the Manhattan L road has been the means of returning to L. W. Grant of New York, now in Longwood, attending the tennis tournament, a lost wallet containing a draft for £1,000, £200 pounds in English bank notes and five first-class tickets to England and return. The wallet has been missing since July 27, 1904. While working under the L structure a few days ago the riveter found it in a crevice.

Last Summer Louis Grant, who is a well known tennis player, started for Europe with a party of five, including his wife and George Wright. The members of the party had pooled their funds in one draft, which with English bank notes and the tickets was in a pocketbook in Grant's possession. The party started for Europe, but the loss was not discovered until they were on the ocean. Then all Grant had was twenty sovereigns in his trousers pocket.

Mr. Grant will make the honest riveter a substantial present.

NOVEL CAUSE OF A PISTOL DUEL

PARIS, Aug. 10.—According to the Figaro, the Comte de Martel and Baron Jean de Gali fought a duel with pistols in the suburbs of Paris. Baron de Gali considered himself seriously offended by a reference in the last novel published by "Gyp," and he consequently wrote a letter to the author, the Comtesse de Martel, whose pseudonym is a matter of common knowledge. The Comte de Martel, in his turn, considered the letter offensive, and he sent his seconds.

When the meeting took place and the word of command was given, the Comte de Martel alone fired, but he did not hit his opponent, who declined to discharge his weapon.

GOES TO LAW TO SUPPRESS GRAPHOPHONE

Quincy Neighbors Have Serious Falling Out Over Repetition of Popular Airs.

PROGRAMME IS TOO LARGE

Five Most Popular Airs for Graphophone

- "Would You Care?"
- "Every Little Bit Helps."
- "Who's There?"
- "Take a Car."
- "Now What D'ye Think of That?"

QUINCY, Aug. 10.—Mrs. Sarah Clare of Edison street has gone to law to suppress the graphophone in the home of her neighbor, Mrs. Rose Allen.

"I would have taken action before," says Mrs. Clare, "but I knew Mrs. Allen is a widow with five children to support and I refrained, hoping matters would adjust themselves."

The exact connection between the five fatherless children and the graphophone is not clear, unless it be that Mrs. Allen takes boarders and the graphophone, according to Mrs. Allen, belongs to one of the boarders and its suppression might injure the boarding house business. Anyway Mrs. Allen is ordered to appear before Judge Lawton in the Superior Court to-morrow and show cause why an injunction should not issue, restraining the graphophone as a "nuisance."

Mrs. Allen is a comely widow of thirty-five years, and her six boarders are workmen in the Fore River Shipyards, where they are accustomed to banging and whanging all day long. The "loud noise," as Mrs. Clare describes it, of the graphophone, does not jar the nerves of the boarders. They like it. And, according to Mrs. Clare's story, they seem to like it a good deal of the time.

Musical Time Card.

Here is the time card of the graphophone concerts, as noted by Mrs. Clare and so reported, for yesterday:

7:30 a. m. to 10:30 a. m., 2 p. m. to 4:45 p. m., and starting in again at 5:15 p. m.

"And it will probably continue till midnight," concluded Mrs. Clare.

"Conditions are extremely disagreeable on Sundays," Mrs. Clare went on; "the machine playing is nearly continuous. I asked Mrs. Allen to stop it, but matters have got worse. The music is about the same as is rendered on all these instruments."

One of the most popular bits of music now for these so-called "talking machines" is "Would You Care?"

Mrs. Clare does care.

"Every Little Bit Helps."

Another selection much favored on phonographs now is "Every Little Bit Helps."

The ill-concealed sarcasm of this title, to one weary of graphophone music, can be imagined.

"In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," "Boston Lawson," and all the latest and most popular songs and music have failed to soothe the Clare household. Mrs. Clare wants the graphophone moderated, if it cannot be stopped.

Mrs. Allen says:

"I think I have a right to have this graphophone played. It belongs to one of my boarders. It is seldom played except when my boarders are home from work. And it is not played after 10 o'clock at night. Mr. Clare tried to get the neighbors to sign a petition to have it stopped, but they refused."

SAYS TAINTED MONEY BUILT FANEUIL HALL

Prof. Shepardson of Chicago Says Peter Faneuil Made His Fortune Illegally.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—"Faneuil Hall in Boston, the Cradle of American Liberty, was built with tainted money," said Professor Francis W. Shepardson of the University of Chicago, while addressing a gathering of the students on "graft."

"Peter Faneuil, as we all know," said he, "built Faneuil Hall, which we historians have termed the Cradle of Liberty. Now, there is on record a letter written by Peter which shows he was engaged in the liquor business. It shows he was not what we would call an honest liquor merchant. He made his money in an illegal way, namely, by beating the Government. This fact is brought out clearly in the letter. Therefore, it can be said that Faneuil Hall was founded on tainted money."

FREE OUTING TO HEARST GUESTS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Beginning to-day and continuing throughout the month the women and children of the Eleventh Congressional District will be the guests of Congressman William Randolph Hearst at Thompson and Dundy's Luna Park, Coney Island. It is the desire of Congressman Hearst that the women and children of the crowded West Side whom he represents in Congress shall have a day of recreation and pleasure during the hot weather in the famous pleasure city by the sea.

Thousands of tickets will be distributed daily throughout the district. The tickets consist of a series of coupons giving admission to Luna Park and to various attractions inside the enclosure. Each ticket also carries a coupon entitling the holder to refreshments.

Round trip tickets to Coney Island via the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Railroad are also attached, good at any time and on any train. It was Congressman Hearst's desire to send his guests down by boat, but it was soon discovered that the fear aroused by the Slocum disaster of last year would act as a deterrent to many and operate against the complete success of the plan.

PHOTOGRAPHERS WILL ENGAGE IN BATTLE OF BALLOTS TODAY.

PHOTO'S BY VAN BOSCHE · STRASSBURG, GERMANY

THREE PHOTOS IN COMPLIMENTARY CLASS.

Hard Fight Expected Between Two Candidates for President, One a Boston Man.

This is the big day at the Photographers of America quarter-centennial convention in Mechanics building, where 2,000 leading members of the craft in the country are gathered for the advancement of the art.

Officers are to be elected, and a red-hot meeting is promised, there being at least three avowed candidates for the presidency, two of whom are Boston men, Charles Wesley Hearn and Morris Burke Parkinson. The Western candidate is Clarence J. Van Deventer of Decatur, Ill., who is vice-president of the outgoing board. From the present outlook Mr. Hearn will be elected by a narrow margin. He has the entire Canadian delegation, numbering fifty, with him, and also many of the leading members of the profession throughout the country.

Mr. Hearn was first vice-president of the national association two years ago, as well as president of the New England association the same year. He was one of the organizers of the famous Lens and Brush Club of Boston, composed of artists and photographers. His friends predict victory, but Mr. Van Deventer's friends have framed a slate and are out to win. Mr. Hearn's friends are working for him alone. They have not gone into any combination to swap votes.

A promising "dark horse," whose name may be sprung as the result of the Van Deventer slate, is Frank R. Barrows of Boston, present treasurer of the organization. It is said that in case Mr. Van Deventer's position as candidate for the presidency weakens Mr. Barrows's name will be presented instead, with Mr. Van Deventer for secretary.

Because of the keen rivalry for first place it is expected that the largest vote ever polled at a national convention will be cast to-day.

Next Year's Convention City.

The city for next year's convention will be selected. Delegates from Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Montreal, Canada, and Cincinnati, O., are making bids for the convention. It is likely, however, that Niagara Falls will be selected because of its natural beauty and accommodations.

Despite the oppressive heat, Paul Revere Hall was crowded to overflowing last night at the concert given in honor of the visiting delegates and their wives by the local entertainment committee.

The programme was well selected and the artists had to respond with encores, so strenuous was the handclapping.

Those who entertained were Mrs. Annie Estelle Hollis, soprano; Mr. R. Smalley, violin cello, and the Temple quartet, comprised of H. S. Tripp, first tenor; E. F. Webber, second tenor; P. F. Baker, baritone, and A. C. Stele, basso. Morris Burke Parkinson played the accompaniments.

To-night comes the big concert by the Photo-Era of Boston in the New England Conservatory of Music.

Mrs. Bertha Cushing Guild, who has a fine dramatic baritone voice, will be the star. She is one of the best singers in New England, having been engaged as soloist for the Worcester music festival.

Miss Josephine Knight, member of the Cecilian Society and a well-known concert and church singer, will also take part. She has a sweet soprano voice.

Others who will appear are Miss Edith Thompson, pianist; M. J. Dwyer, tenor; Alcide De Andia, bass; Samuel Gorodetzky, violinist; Walter J. Kugler, organist, and Miss Annie L. Berry, harpist and accompanist.

Announce Awards To-morrow.

The announcement of awards will be made to-morrow.

Some of the most notable exhibits at the convention from an artistic standpoint are those of six society women by Dudley Hoyt, Rochester, N. Y.; landscapes and portraits by Proctor, West Virginia; landscapes and portraits by Alfred Holden, Philadelphia; figures, study heads and landscapes by "Billy" Rundle, Denver; six ideal study heads and shoulders, for three of which his wife posed, by R. Frank Yerex, Boston; special exhibit of home portraits by Henry Koshiva, Providence, the only Japanese exhibitor; portrait by J. H. Garo, Boston; six general portraits by Julius Strauss, St. Louis; six portraits by Evanoff, Conly Studio, Boston; three figures of women and three portraits by S. L. Stein, Milwaukee; eight prints, including portrait of Alice Roosevelt, by Henry Pierce, Newport; heads of women and children by Durkoop, Germany and four men's heads by Herman Schervel, Worcester.

Many Notable Exhibits.

Others are portraits of six women by S. Edward Rosch, St. Louis; one study head and five portraits by R. P. Bellsmith, Cincinnati; one study head and five portraits of women by Brock & Koonce, Ashville, N. C.; monks' heads by Hearn, Boston; series of low-toned portraits of unusual arrangement by Elias Goldensky, Philadelphia; six pictures by J. E. Griffin, West Virginia; six portraits of a child by Morris Burke Parkinson, Boston; and six low-tone figure portraits by J. W. Porter, Youngstown, O.

An exceedingly interesting exhibit of photographs by the three-color process is shown by Falke, of New York. The pictures are done by a three negative process, giving natural colors to the subject. It is considered a remarkable exhibit by all photographers who view the work. The process is a new one.

The Lens and Brush Club, of Boston, has a special exhibit of fifty pictures, some of the best specimens being by Frizell, Milton; Latimer, Boston; Baker, Boston; Sherman, Andover; Hastings, Boston; Bell, Everett; Partridge, Boston; Whitney & Son, Cambridge; Merrill, Salem; Bissonette, Roxbury; Obenaus, Albany, N. Y., and Bird Studio, Cambridge. Three miniatures by James Stewart Campton, president of the Lens and Brush Club, attract much attention.

HALF MILLION GONE, HE SEEKS ALMSHOUSE

Former Head of Brokerage Firm Calls for Aid With Seven Cents in Pocket.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—With seven cents in his pocket, the remains of a fortune of half a million dollars, an old man, with flowing white side whiskers, asked Commissioner of Charities Henry Scharp, of New Rochelle, N. Y., to commit him to the Westchester County Almshouse. Not even his broken patent leather shoes, his frayed clothing or his out-of-date silk hat could conceal the fact that he was a gentleman.

"Sir," said he, addressing Mr. Scharp, and raising his hat, "I regret to say that I am an object of charity, and without seeming to boast I wish to say that at one time I was worth $500,000, and cared no more for $10,000 than you do possibly for ten cents. I frequently carried that much money about.

"Now, sir, it is my unfortunate lot to be possessed of only seven cents. Business reverses and the inability of a gentleman at my time of life to retrieve his fortunes makes it my necessity to appeal for charity. Quite recently I paid my last $5 to my landlord, and, there being more due him, he has quite properly requested me to move. Having no friends I must request you to commit me to an almshouse."

To the Commissioner's questions he replied that he was J. T. Rapely, eighty-two years old, formerly head of a brokerage house in New York City. He said he had lived at the best hotels and had spent money with a lavish hand. He had met with some reverses, but retired with considerable money. As his money became reduced he sought modest quarters in boarding houses. Commissioner Scharp said he would send him to the almshouse at Eastview and, owing to age, he was provided with a carriage. He was permitted to take his trunk with him, and courteously raised his hat as he was driven away.

HARRIS'S WIFE ON STAND IN HIS DEFENCE

Corroborates Testimony of Brockton Inspector in Denial of Charges.

Special to the Boston American.

BROCKTON, Aug. 10.—Arguments of counsel will be heard at the adjourned hearing to-night before Mayor Keith and the Board of Aldermen on the charges preferred against Police Inspector Chester E. Harris by Stella Elliot. The accused man entered a positive and detailed denial at the last session, when the evidence for the defence was heard.

His counsel called many witnesses, prominent among whom was Mrs. Hattie M. Harris, wife of Inspector Harris. Her husband's testimony in denial of the charges was corroborated in many instances by her. She testified that, from February 20 to late in March last year, during which time the most serious allegations are placed, she was ill, and that her husband was almost constantly at home with her when he was off duty.

Mrs. Harris testified that there was no iron and brass bedstead in their house, and never had been, nor was there any cabinet of any kind, such as had been described by Mrs. Jennie Sherman.

Harris testified to arresting Miss Elliot, of her threats and of reporting the matter to City Marshal William A. Boyden. He said her threats were "lies."

City Solicitor Dowd: "Did you investigate these allegations of Miss Elliot?"

Inspector Harris: "I did not. I knew they were not true."

"You did not consider this a serious enough crime to run down?"

"I knew it wasn't so. I felt if I was innocent, and I am innocent, such stories would not bother me."

INSPECTOR AT BATH.

BATH, Me., Aug. 10.—Commander Samuel H. Leonard, U. S. N., retired, is here as inspector of machinery at the iron works, succeeding Commander Harry Hall, ordered to the battleship Alabama.

SHEA ACCEPTS THE BLAME FOR LOSING STRIKE

Teamsters' Chief Scored in Executive Reports at the Convention.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—Cornelius P. Shea of Boston, President of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, defended his conduct of the recent strike in Chicago at the Brotherhood's annual convention.

"I say to you," he said, "that I did my duty there as I saw it, and whatever responsibility is attached to the conduct of that strike I am not afraid to tell you: Put it on the shoulders of Shea."

President Shea came in for criticism when the reports of executive members were read. Michael Casey of San Francisco, Third Vice-President of the Brotherhood, in his report characterized the strike as a dismal failure that had brought the teamsters into disrepute. "The organization," the report added, "has suffered in prestige, and it will take years to wipe out the disgrace resulting from it. It will be a mistake for this convention to whitewash the officers who were responsible for this."

The Seventh Vice-President, John Sheridan of Chicago, in his report, recommended that "no local should become involved in a strike, sympathetic or otherwise, except by a two-thirds vote of the local members, together with the indorsement of the Joint Council and the approval of the General Executive Board." No action was taken on the recommendation.

Last year eighty-six new locals were organized and 106 discontinued. There was a falling off in membershipp of 9,683, due, it is declared, to lack of discipline.

DIES AT AGE OF 85 YEARS.

NEW SOPRANO MADE HIT AT BAR HARBOR

BAR HARBOR, Me., Aug 10.—The musical event of the season here was the performance of the oratorio, "The Creation." It served to introduce Mme. Bertha Harmon, a dramatic soprano of attractive stage presence, whose rich, full voice was heard to advantage.

She sang with both skill and judgment and her appearance was a complete success.

How to Fool a Lazy Liver with Artificial Exercise

EVERY serious Sickness has a small beginning.

And, in nine cases out of ten that small beginning is made in the Bowels.

Indigestion is the beginning of most diseases.

It paves the way for all others.

Lack of exercise, hasty eating, improper food, are its first causes.

Laziness, and postponement, permits it to grow into Chronic Constipation, which means life-long Discomfort.

It isn't necessary to be sick-a-bed, you know, in order to be mighty uncomfortable.

Even slight indigestion affects the nerves, dulls the mind, and obscures the merry sunshine of Life.

And, Indigestion once started, grows fast, corrodes temperament, and discounts happiness, good cheer, capacity.

It does that long before it puts you on the Sick list.

Every thinking Doctor knows why.

Professor Rand knew it.

That's why he framed up for students his famous formula for Happiness, viz.: "Trust in God, and keep your Bowels open."

The Bowels need adjustment from time to time, just like a clock, or a watch.

No "Good time" is humanly possible without this.

And, the time to adjust the watch is not when it has run down, nor when the main spring is broken, but at the very minute adjustment is discovered necessary.

The time to adjust the Bowels is not merely when your Head Aches, when your Liver is Sick, your Stomach in Revolt, and Nature's Food Process retarded for 24 hours or longer.

The proper time to adjust them is the very minute you suspect they need adjustment.

—If your tongue is slightly coated,
—If your breath is under suspicion,
—If your Head feels a trifle heavy or dull,
—If digestion seems even a little slow,
—If Heartburn, Belching, Colic or Restlessness begin to show themselves,
—That's the time to eat a Cascaret.

Don't imagine the Cascaret is ineffective because it is pleasant to eat as Candy.

It acts as pleasantly as it tastes. It is as congenial to your Bowels as it is to your Palate.

It is not a "Bile-driver" which floods out your stomach today with fluid juices needed for tomorrow.

But, it acts like Exercise, instead.

It stimulates the muscular lining of the Bowels and Intestines, so that they mechanically digest food and drive out the waste.

This is why Cascarets differ from all Purgatives, Physic, Cathartics and Whirlwind Drugs that help today at tomorrow's expense.

Cascarets are the only Bowel and Liver medicine that do not need to be used in larger doses every month you use them.

The time to use a Cascaret is when you first suspect you need one.

They only way to have them ready to use precisely when you need them is to carry them constantly in your pocket, as you do a Watch or a Lead pencil.

The ten cent box of Cascarets is made thin, flat, round-edged, and small, for this precise purpose.

"UNWORTHY OF HER LOVE, END IT ALL"

Heart-sick Melrose Youth Disappears and Writes Letter Hinting at Suicide.

"I feel that I am unworthy of Ruby's love, and as that is all I have to live for I am going to end it all. There is money in the bank to defray the expenses of bringing my body back to Melrose. See that this is done."

A letter containing these sentences is the only word that has been received from Nat Bean, who disappeared from his home on Malven street, Melrose, last Sunday. The letter is postmarked "Ticonderoga, N. Y.," and is addressed to one of his friends in Melrose.

Bean is eighteen years old and was employed in a grocery store in Melrose.

Sunday he attended church, and Sunday evening left for Boston. When he did not return home his mother, Mrs. Martha Bean, became alarmed and sent her son Charles in search of him, thinking he might have stopped uptown. But no trace of him could be found.

Friends of the young man tell of his acquaintance with a certain Miss Taylor, whose first name is Ruby. They believe this is the person referred to in the letter. Miss Taylor has been summering on her father's farm in Ticonderoga. Miss Taylor resides in Melrose during the Winter, living with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Taylor of Rowe street. Young Bean is said to have been very attentive to this young lady.

Last Summer Bean ran away from home to New York, where he was located and brought home by Chief of Police Frank M. McLaughlin of Melrose. He was absent several days. On this occasion he left a note at his home, stating that he contemplated suicide, but when he departed this time not a word was left to indicate his intentions.

CURRENT PREVENTS SWIM OF CHANNEL

DOVER, Eng., Aug. 10.—T. W. Burgess started from the coast-guard station at Lydden, four miles northwest of this port, in another attempt to swim across the channel. Burgess got within four miles of the French coast when the strong current commenced to carry him back, compelling him to give up the attempt.

MAUDE GONNE FREED FROM HER HUSBAND

Separated from Major McBride by Court but No Final Divorce Granted.

CHILD GIVEN TO MOTHER

PARIS, Aug. 10.—Major John MacBride and his wife, who was Maud Gonne, the "Irish Joan of Arc," were separated by the civil tribunal of the Seine on Mrs. MacBride's petition for a divorce. The court decreed only a judicial separation at this time, and left the question of absolute divorce for a future hearing.

Their son, Sagan (John), a year and a half old, was given into his mother's custody, but Major MacBride is privileged to visit the boy at certain times.

The case came before the court on July 26, Maitre Cruppe appearing for the wife, and Maitre Labori, who defended Captain Dreyfus for the husband. Maitre Cruppe pictured MacBride returning from South Africa, where, commanding the Irish brigade, he fought bravely with the Boers, meeting Maud Gonne and firing her affection and imagination by his heroism and patriotism. They went to America on a lecture tour, and seeming to be congenial, they were married in Paris, February 21, 1903.

"Soon Mrs. MacBride was disillusioned" her lawyer declared. "She discovered her husband to be a roysterer and a rake. For their child's sake, she bore with him until she could do so no longer."

"Major MacBride admires feminine beauty as do all brave men, but he is no rake," retorted Maitre Labori. "His wife is insanely jealous, but without just cause. Nor is he a drunkard. He is what we call here in Paris a 'rude buveur'—he can dring heavily without getting tipsy. He was known in the army as a strong drinker. But his brain is always clear, nay, brilliant. He has collaborated with his wife in her literary wark; indeed he wrote some of the striking passages in her lectures and books."

"Major McBride has no literary ability whatever," returned Maitre Cruppe. "He can write only the roughest sketch of an article."

Maitre Labori declared that "the Irish Joan of Arc, the apostle of Irish liberty," was born of English parents in England.

"She had no Irish blood at all," he exclaimed.

Mrs. MacBride's advocate ridiculed this statement.

"She is a thorough Irishwoman," he cried. "Born in Ireland, she has consecrated her life and work to Ireland's cause."

"But she brings here not one proof that she was born in Ireland," said Maitre Labori. "Let her produce her birth certificate. It will show she was born in England. Nor was she a Roman Catholic until she became one for love of MacBride that she might marry him."

DRANK HARD; DIED IN AN ICE HOUSE

EAST WEYMOUTH, Aug. 10.—Thomas Jaggen, forty-two years of age, of this town, was found dead in Cushing's icehouse by William Healey and Thomas Moran. Medical Examiner Fraser said that death was due to heart disease, caused by exposure. He had been drinking heavily.

20% OFF BLUE SERGE SUITS

Most clothiers are hesitating to mark down their blue serge suits this year.

The cost of blue serge has advanced so sharply that the suits they own are worth more today than when they were made.

Next season, with serges still higher, the suits will be worth still more, so that instead of feeling disposed to sell them at a reduction now, there is a tendency to save them until later on and then offer them at the advanced prices for which the new serges will be sold.

In direct contrast to this policy is our method of selling each season the clothing made for that season. Strict adherence to this principle has caused the following mark downs on

Blue Serge Suits

$25 Grade, 20 % off, Now $20.00
$20 Grade, 20 % off, Now $16.00
$18 Grade, 20 % off, Now $14.00
$15 Grade, 20 % off, Now $12.00
$12 Grade, 20 % off, Now $9.60

There are now about 400 rough and smooth-finished suits, all sizes still among them, from 34 to 44, and quite a few sizes in "longs" and "stouts."

BASEBALL CHAMPS MEET TIGERS BOXING MELLODY TO BOX RYAN RACING AND ALL ATHLETICS

ONLY 2 DAYS' CIRCUIT MEET AT READVILLE

Owing to existing legal conditions, the executive board of the New England Trotting Horse Breeders' Association has cut the grand circuit meeting at Readville from a full week of racing to a two-days' meeting.

The reason for this act is the anticipated interference from local authorities who look after the ethical conditions of the Commonwealth.

The meeting will take in only those classes which filled last April. They are the Blue Hill, 2:30 class, trotting, purse $5,000, with thirty-eight entries; Massachusetts, 2:10, class, trotting, purse $10,000, with sixteen nominations; the Ponkupog, 2:14 class, trotting, purse $3,000, forty-one entries; the Tryo, three-year-olds, 2:25 class, trotting, purse $3,000, thirty-six entries, and the Neponset, 2:08 class pacing, purse $3,000, twenty-six entries. The sum of the purses is $24,000.

In addition there is the tyromatch race for pacers at $5,000 a corner between Audobon Boy, 2:08¼; Ecstatic, 2:05¾, and Helen Mac, 2:04½. (These several events will just about fill a two days' card and the management will give the races at an estimated loss of $30,000. An attempt to pull off the original programme would cost nearly $60,000.

CHARLIE GOFF (A COP) RUHLIN'S OLD SPARRING PARTNER WRESTLES HIM.

WILL RUHLIN BE CHAM

BY TAD.

Billy Madden, who has managed Gus Ruhlin for seven years or more, thinks Ruhlin is better to-day than he has ever been in his life before.

"Gus is the real old violin," said Billy the other day to a reporter in 'Frisco "We tried to bunch years ago, and, of course, met with a couple of set-backs, but you never saw Gus in a fightt hat was all one-sided, did you"

"Yes, sir, Gus is the best of the heavies to-day, and after we get through with this giant, McCormick, I will prove to you taht he's the real champion. These other fellows don't want any of his game.

"I tried to get Munroe, but he passed him up; Fitzsimmons didn't want anything to do with us at all, and Jim Corbett laughed and said that he was an actor. Now, what is a man going to do if you can't get a fight? I will get Hart after McCormick and show you who the real champion is."

Ruhlin has been working like a Trojan for the past two weeks, and when seen at his training quarters there yesterday looked like a bronze figure from the c door work. Charlie Goff, who used to as sparring partner for Ruhlin, and w is at present on the police force in 'Fris goes out every day or so and works w the big fellow. Goff is still in good sha and keeps the big German hustling all t time they are at. Ruhlin did his last b ing yesterday afternoon with Goff and t amateur heavyweight.

He is practising his long left jab f big McCormick, and thinks this the m effective, as his opponent will be inc taller and many pounds heavier. Gus mu have some way to keep the giant off a a well-directed left, following closely wi a right, should help mix things up.

MOTOR CYCLISTS EXPECT TO LOWER RECORDS SATURDAY

The great race put up by G. H. Curtis on his five-horse power, two cylinder motorcycle at Waltham when he started from scratch and won the event in 34m. 21 1-5s. for the twenty-five miles caused his stock to take a boom for the championship races scheduled for next Saturday afternoon at Charles River Park, where the fastest motorcycles in the country will come together in six events.

Curtis in his ride on the road yesterday averaged about 1m. 23s. to the mile, and considering that it was on a small five-mile course with numerous turns his time was remarkable. At different times on good stretches his machine whizzed along at a mile a minute gait and justified the claims of Curtiss that he had a record machine.

Curtiss will face the starter in all the championship races at Cambridge, and will compete in the events open to machines of his type. Yesterday he stated that while he realized that he would be up against some of the best track men in the country he felt that he would have no trouble in defeating them, for he is confident that his machine is the fastest in the United States if not in the world.

Oscar Hodstrom and Charlie Metz, designers of other two-cylinder machines, do not agree with Curtiss, and claim that they will lower his colors on Saturday afternoon at the Cambridge track. Both Hodstrom and Metz have two-cylinder machines, the former four and the latter one. They did not use the machines in the race yesterday, owing to the fact that they were afraid of their being injured by falls on the road.

Their prize packages will be a Charles River park to-day, and the operators will spend their time from now until Saturday afternoon in getting used to the track. Freddie Hoyt, who will ride one of Hodstrom's machines, stated yesterday that he was confident that the man who wins the one-mile championship at Charles R park on Saturday will have to do be than a mile a minute, for several machines already entered are capable of that speed.

G. H. Curtiss is going to make a hard try to win the ten-mile open free-for-all, and states that every mile should be covered in less than a minute, and that if he gets away in front his machine will reg ter that time. Everything points to v wind racing.

PORTABLE GRANDSTANDS FOR AUTOMOBILE BEACH RACING

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Portable grandstands for automobile beach racing—this is the very latest suggestion which has come out of the proposition of members of the Atlantic City Automobile Club to build a permanent grandstand capable of seating 10,000 people on the line of the new beach racecourse below Ventor, N. J.

"A beach grandstand would certainly have to be portable," declared Secretary S. M. Butler of the Automobile Club of America yesterday. "Permanent grandstands along the beach course are absolutely out of the question. But a portable grandstand is quite another thing. The Racing Board is open to any suggestions in this line."

In the development of public interest in the high speeding of automobiles in race competition there have been many things borrowed from horseracing. That the enthusiasts of the auto world should reach out for the grandstand was a perfectly natural outcome. Built of light but substantial wood, with awnings to stop the rays of the sun, and equipped so that it could be 'struck' with all the celerity of the circus tent, the project is not so visionary as it might seem at first.

Tuning Up and Handicapping.

But before beach racing can be labelled Success in tall letters, there will have to be even greater requisitions upon horseracing.

"Something has got to be done to improve the finishes of automobile races; it makes no difference whether it be a beach course or a made-over inland mile track," said a prominent member of the Racing Board yesterday. "Too wide an application of the principle of horseracing cannot be made. If the finishes of the auto races are not improved upon the public will never be interested in the contests.

"Now, the morning gallops, for instance. To them correspond the tuning up of the cars to get them into form.

"Handicapping? Well, here is the real trouble. The automobile is mechanical and nothing else, and past performances count for little. Efforts of the Racing Board are now being bent to the improvement of the mechanical devices, and when that is accomplished there will be past performances and close finishes.

"The struggle to get better matched cars for the contests on the ocean beaches is the one great worry of the motor enthusiasts. The racing board is now endeavoring to get an assortment of cars for the coming beach races at Cape May August 19, which will produce a finish equal in dash and spirit to any contest in horseflesh at Saratoga. Cars coming in a quarter of a mile apart have been the result in the past.

After the Exciting Finish.

"Will the racing board manage to capture the one thing which makes horseracing so enjoyable—the exciting finish? I hope so, but I am very dubious. There must be closer competition, else auto racing will perish as a subject of interest to the general public. It is to be hoped that by the coming Winter the mechanical complement of the cars will be so well in hand that the contests at Ormond Beach and Pablo Beach will attract the attendance of many others than owners of cars, but that can only be done by an improvement of the race finishes."

After all, the automobile racing is only in its baby clothes—the first road race in this vicinity was held five years ago on Long Island.

EASTERNLEAGUE HAS TROUBLE OVER DATES

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 10.—There is likely to be trouble in the Eastern League over a confusion of dates, in which the Newark, Baltimore, Jersey City and Providence clubs figure. Newark and Baltimore, according to the regular schedule, were to play in Newark to-day, but in the middle of July by agreement between these two clubs, the date was changed to Sunday, September 3, and the Providence club was notified that Manager Burnham of the Newark club would insist on Providence playing here to-day, as that team would then be in this city and was not scheduled to play elsewhere.

Newark advertised two games for to-day with Providence, but that club refused to play. Manager Dunne of the team admits that since Providence was notified that they would be expected to play a date was arranged with the Jersey City club for a game at Providence to-day, and that he intends to fill the latter date. Manager Burnham of the Newarks has warned the Providence team that if it fails to show up on the local grounds to-day he will claim both games advertised by forfeiture, and he has advised President Powers to that effect.

FREDERICKS MAKES RECORD

Special to the Boston American.

WHEATON, Ill., Aug. 10.—The thirty-six-hole qualifying round for the United States amateur golf championship is completed, with the score runing from 155 to 174, the former figures, made by D. P. Fredericks of Oil City, being the lowest ever made in two rounds to qualify for a national tournament.

MAY MEET SWEET MARIE FOR $10,000

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Notwithstanding Sweet Marie's victory over Tiverton, 2:04¾, at Boston last week in the fastest three heat trotting race on record, A. B. Gwathmey, former president of the Cotton Exchange, is not convinced that the big California mare can beat his Speedway flyer.

In speaking of the race at Boston Mr. Gwathmey said yesterday that Tiverton was quite lame when he started, having wrenched his ankle several days before the contest

"I have more faith in him than ever," said the owner of Tiverton, "after seeing him win a race in 2:05¼ and come back within a neck of the winner in 2:04¾, when he was not in condition to race. If he recovers from his lameness, and I do not doubt that he will, I shall be ready to match him for $10,000 a side against Sweet Marie, Lou Dillon, Major Del Mar or any other trotter in the world. I have seen enough to satisfy me that he will trot close to 2:00 this season if he meets with no further mishaps."

Tiverton is now at Buffalo, where he is engaged to trot this week, but Mr. Gwathmey says it is not probable he will be in condition to start.

M'LEAN WILL RACE HIS OLD RIVAL

Floyd McFarland, the lanky Californian, arrived at the Revere track yesterday morning to start training for the big inter-city team-paced race scheduled for next Saturday night at the beach track. McFarland came from New York, in company with Hugh McLean and Menus Bedell, the trio having ridden at the opening races in Madison Square Garden last Monday night.

McLean and Bedell continued across town to the North station, where they took a train to Manchester, at which place they were booked to ride a match race last night. Barring a postponement of their race, the pair will arrive at Revere to-day and tune up for the coming team race.

Big Team Race.

In the contest which will be the star event of the meet Floyd McFarland and Menus Bedell will rtpresent New York and Hugh McLean and William Stinson will carry the colors of this city. The distance will be forty miles, divided into four ten-mile heats, and the greatest kind of racing is anticipated.

In the first heat McLean will probably face his old rival McFarland, whom he defeated Monday night in the garden by a small margin? McFarland claimed that he was not used to riding behind pace on a track of so minute proportion as the garden oval which is but ten laps to the mile. He stated yesterday that he is confident of giving the champion a hot rub in their heat.

The second heat will probably bring together Menus Bedell and William Stinson. In the third heat the winners of the previous heats will clash, and in the fourth the losers come together. It should make a grand race.

Collins vs. McDonald.

Collins and McDonald who rode a ten-mile paced race are both moving fast in training, and it is expected that the boys will make a pretty contest. Collins is riding very fast behind Charlie Turville, who says that he not only has a winner but a comer in the paced game as well.

All the prominent amateurs have entered for the mile handicap, and the card appears to be a recordbreaker as an attraction.

FRENCH CARS ARE READY FOR RACE

There is general satisfaction in automobile circles over the latest news from Paris, which is to the effect that the expense of sending a team to compete for the Vanderbilt trophy is not worrying the French makers of fast cars, and that in all probability a team would be sent over to race against the best machines America can produce. The American drivers who competed in the Bennett race returned from Europe with the news that the Frenchmen would not take part in the Vanderbilt cup event, owing to the fact that the course was too short to allow a large number of machines to race upon it with safety, and that the expense of sending a team to America was out of proportion to the benefits to be derived, even if victory was secured.

When the French manufacturers heard this, they hastened to put themselves right before the American motor car world. They realized that to show the white feather after holding an eliminatory trial for the Vanderbilt race might create the impression that they feared defeat, and would give the Yankee makers a chance to do a little crowing. Louis Renault expressed surprise that a question of expense had even been brought forward as a reason for the withdrawal of the French team. He said that, so far as he knew, only one thing would prevent his qualified car from being sent to America for the race on Long Island, and that was a decision on the part of the A. C. F. to the effect that the course chosen by the American officials was too dangerous.

A member of another French firm said that, as his firm had already given its promise to race in America, there could be no change at this late date. The question of expense, as far as he was aware, had not come up. He said there was no fear that his firm would not be a contestant for the Vanderbilt race. Similar replies were received from two other firms, both of which have qualified to take part in the American race. The firms that qualified in the French trial will hardly withdraw for one salient reason, and that is that there are several French companies only too willing to take their places in the Vanderbilt contest. Thery, the winner of the Bennett trophy, has said that he is through with racing, and that his partner, Callois, would not compete in America. Even if this be true, the Richard-Brasier cars that they drove will surely be seen, particularly Thery's car, as the American representatives of the Richard-Brasier machine are willing to bring the car over at their own expense.

FERRIS WON'T BE IN GAME

Owing to the death of his sister, Hobe Ferris, the inimitable second baseman of the Champs, will not play for two or three days. His place will probably be taken by Unglaub.

RACING AT READVILLE.

The seventh matinee of the Gentlemen's Driving Club of Boston, will be held at Readville this afternoon. There are eight events on the card.

MOTOR BOAT RACE FOR 400 MILE

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Motor boat talk among motor boat men at the yacht clubs along the Sound and Hudson River is now centred on the cruise of the American Power Boat Association, which starts August 17 for the Thousand Islands.

As this is the first cruise of the kind ever attempted in this country, it calls for much comment regarding distances from point to point, the waters to be covered, the stops to be made and the many other things of interest to those taking part in the trip. The distance from New York to the Thousand Islands Yacht Club is approximately 400 miles by way of the Hudson River to Albany, the Erie Canal to Oswego and across the lake to Cape Vincent, which is the route selected.

The commodore of the Albany Yacht Club will meet and escort the fleet from Hudson, which is the rendezvous, to the anchorage of his club, where the first night will be spent as the guests of the Albany Yacht Club. The Oswego Yacht Club has arranged to give the travellers a royal welcome, and when the St. Lawrence is reached a round of entertainment is arranged for among the various clubs in that vicinity.

The committee in charge would ciate the early entries of those inten to join the cruise, as the entries must close on August 12. They should be mailed at once to the chairman, J. H. McIntosh, No. 32 Broadway. The committee announces the following entries already received:

Boat and Owner.	Club from.
Cactus II., C. E. Proctor	Indian Harbor
Ida Bell, Louis Kahnweilers	Brooklyn
Amrita, Dr. Emil Heuel	New York Athletic
Nawquist, A. Gardiner Cooper	Indian Harbor
Nymphaea, Preston B. Lee	Philadelphia
Mao, Dr. Seymour Oppenheimer	Far Rockaway
Graydon, Arthur S. Gray	Albany
Rene, S. J. Fleet	Atlantic
Linnet, Egbert Le Fevre, M. D.	Thousand Islands
Snipe, George N. Burt	Oswego
Aztec, J. J. Adams	Indian Harbor
Viper II., Major J. G. R. Glasgow	Buffalo Launch
Iris, Matthew McCarty	Albany

The Frontenac Yacht Club, in the Thousand Islands, announce, through their vice commodore, Mr. Alfred Costello, that they will hold a water carnival on the evening of August 25, to be followed by an entertainment at the club house, in honor of the visitors. This club is situated about ten miles up the river from the Thousand Islands Yacht Club, where the owners of the cruising boats will make their headquarters.

AUSTRALIAN GIRL SWIMMER COMING

"Do you think the Americans will like my swimming?"

This question was asked by a foreign girl swimmer who is coming to this country to race, while she was paddling along on a recent long-distance swim in the River Thames, near London. She was Miss Annette Kellermann of Australia.

During this journey she completely overshadowed all previous performances under similar conditions, including that of Captain Webb, making thirteen and a half miles in three hours fifty-four minutes and sixteen seconds. She wants to meet the best man in this country in a ten-mile race.

"You know I am curious to know how Americans will regard my swimming," she said. "I am going to the United States early in September, but I haven't any idea how they swim over there."

Miss Kellermann is only nineteen years old and has never been defeated in any contest of long-distance swimming or artistic diving, either by man or woman. So far her record is one continuous list of victories. At fifteen she won the amateur mile championship of Australia in still salt water, and her time—twenty-nine minutes—was three minutes and forty-nine seconds faster than any woman in the world had done. She then made two and a quarter miles in forty-six minutes and thirty seconds. When she had acquired all the amateur Australian championships Miss Kellermann became a professional.

In the last three years she won every Australian long-distance swim, making five miles in one hour, forty-eight minutes and thirty-four seconds, and ten and one-quarter miles in four hours and twenty-three minutes. So far her other speed records are 100 yards in one minute and eighteen seconds, the best ever made by a woman, and a quarter mile in seven minutes and two seconds, although she prefers the long-distance tasks. She is also the holder of many championship prizes won in her diving contests.

"It's no use for a woman to try to beat a man at short distances," says Miss Kellermann. "That is a question of brute strength. But for long distances I certainly favor my sex, because we have more patience.

"I am willing to swim any man in the world at any distance over ten miles. I do hope I will be able to get some of the American champions to try a long-distance match with me."

avy stress, as the Tigers would hang on matter how many successive games were tyed and keep any team going the limit get the upper hand.

As the favorites were out to make a ecord at games won they had no idea of tting the Tigers thwart them in their deavor to collect the wins and the fans eded no information that the eighteen ning battle would be one of the features the season and might take extra sessions get a final result before the implements warfare were stowed away for the night. The Tigers, smarting under the lashing ceived in the opening game, when the amps applied the kalsomine, were show their claws in a menacing manner ich augered badly for the Champs, un s they put the shakles on at short notice d the fur was likely to fly before ere e tide of battle had fallen.

Manager Armour, with the intention of aking the best possible move for his en prospects, had the veterans of his ching staff looseuing up and inspected choice material with a critical eye and cided that the calibre of the foe de anded that he present the most puzzling llet heavers he had in the bunch.

Frank Kitson, the old campaigner, the ro of many a hard fought contest who d little fear of the champs was the st selection while Eddie Killian, the aftiest of the lot whose left-handed aters were the hardest to fathom was cked to hold the centre of the stage in he second clash.

Not to be outdone in the way of exhibiting some equal stripe of pitching material, Jimmy Collins pulled Tannehill and Young off the shelf and had them unwind and get ready for some arduous stunts that were on the card.

There was much dispair that Hobe Ferris was out of the ranks on this occasion as he was called away because of the death of his sister but Bob Unglaug, the great utility man was at the second station to do his best to fill Hobe's shoes.

BIG CHANGES PLANNED IN MAJOR LEAGUES

CLEVELAND, Aug. 10.—The many conferences now going on between the club owners of the big leagues pave the way to all sorts of speculation as to what is up. Something heroic is undoubtedly being discussed. The opinion prevails in the East that plans for the amalgamation of the two major leagues into one twelve-club organization are well under way.

In the West it is quite generally be eved that the American league is to be reorganized on a basis calculated to put the National league out of the running.

This scheme provides for the withdrawal of the Washington, Detroit and St. Louis franchises and the substitution of the Pittsburg and Cincinnati clubs from the National league., St. Louis would be repre ted by a consolidation of the Cardinals Browns.

is would give a league comprising the ghlanders in New York, the White Sox Chicago, the Champions in Boston, the Athletics in Philadelphia, the Browns-Cardinals in St. Louis and the Cleveland, Pittsburg and Cincinnati clubs. The Giants and the Cubs would be left for a nucleus of a new National league, and another club would be selected from Buffalo, Louisville or some other city to fill in the eight members, in case the old organization continues live, which is extremely doubtful.

The American league, under this aspect, would be the strongest organization ever formed. The remnant of the National league would not be strong enough to wage war on the American league, reinforced by such powerful cities as Pittsburg and Cincinnati. Promoters of this move declare the initiative has already been taken, and that the end of the season will surely see the amalgamation.

PITTSBURG HEARS UNION OF ONE BIG LEAGUE

PITTSBURG, Aug. 10.—Pittsburg has already become the storm centre of the baseball world. That there is a deal on to consolidate the two big leagues is no longer doubted by those here who are able to put two and two together.

On last Sunday night Barney Dreyfuss admitted that he had received a telegram from Frank De Haas Robison of Cleveland making an appointment with him on Monday. This appointment was kept, and the two magnates kept up a telegraphic fire on Garry Herrman at Cincinnati. The result was that Dreyfus was called to Cincinnati last night for conference with Herrman, leaving Robison here.

FIFE WILL SAIL THE TEMERAIRE

Special to the Boston American.

TORONTO, Aug. 10.—The Temeraire, challenger for the Canada Cup, has arrived at Charlotte, having been towed here. She attracted much attention from local yachtsmen who looked her over, but they are not scared by her appearance.

The Temeraire is a few inches shorter than the Iroquois, the defender of the cup, on the water line, being just three inches under thirty feet, which is the limit. Over all she measures fifty feet, or two feet shorter than the American boat, and this difference in length is in the after overhang. The Iroquois is ten feet three inches beam at the deck and the Temeraire is ten feet two inches. In draft the difference is again two inches, the Iroquois being seven feet and the Temeraire six feet ten inches. The ballast of the Iroquois is 11,850 pounds and the Temeraire 11,400 pounds. This shows that the defender of the cup is the bigger boat.

In sail area there is very little difference. The Iroquois spreads 1,550 square feet and the Temeraire 1,547.86 square feet, but Fife on the Temeraire has arranged his sail plan so that he has more in the mainsail of the challenger than Charles F. Herreshoff has put in the mainsail of the Iroquois, and the sail plan of the Temeraire also shows a loftier rig and a shorter bowsprit. The Iroquois's mainsail measures 1,100 square feet and that of the Temeraire 1,111.41 square feet. The fore triangle of the Iroquois measures 450 square feet and that of the Temeraire 436.45 square feet. The bowsprit of the Iroquois is 7 feet 4 inches outboard, while on the Temeraire it is 5 feet.

The Temeraire will haul out to clean on Thursday, and will be ready for the first race on Saturday. William Fife has arrived at Rochester, and it is said that he is to sail on the challenger.

JUDGESHOWSSENSE IN AUTO HEARING

Over in Connecticut they have at least one discriminating judge, as is shown by his decision just handed down, and to which the Automobile Club of America directs attention.

Alfred E. Ommen, counsel for the club, says that to some persons who are prejudiced against automobiles it may appear novel that cases are decided by the Connecticut jurist on the law and the evidence and not on the general principle that the automobile is a danger to be suppressed.

Harry P. Stevens was arrested in Stamford, Ct., for driving his machine through the outskirts of the city faster than the law allows—twelve miles an hour. Mr. Stevens declared he was not disobeying law intentionally, but was trying to his machine down to the required speed n he was arrested.

Before Judge Downs.

he trial was before City Judge Nicholas Downs and Mr. Ommen was retained to nd Mr. Stevens. After a trial the de lant was fined $1, and in the decision ge Downs says that the claim that the struction of the Connecticut statute and method of its enforcement in Stamford resulted in unnecessary interference tourists led him to give the whole ct careful study.

dge Downs says that the purpose of statute is to prevent the running of or vehicles in such a manner as to en ger life and property.

o attempt to run a vehicle through a ded thoroughfare at even a slower rate peed than the minimum prescribed by statute, if because of the conditions ing at the moment such attempt en ers life, limb or property, is a violation of the statute, and may be a more serious violation than to run at a rate of speed exceeding the statutory limits along a road which the driver can plainly see is free from travelers or intersecting streets as to preclude the possibility of a collision. The latter case presents a mere technical offense, while in the former there would be a disregard of the rights of others which would constitute a wrong per se."

Statute Salutary.

The decision says that the statute is a salutary one, but its enforcement should be marked by the exercise of good sense, and that severe penalties should be imposed where the evidence shows that the spirit of the law has been violated.

"The automobile," continues the judge, "like many other innovations upon established methods or conditions, has many opponents. The trolley car was at one time quite generally regarded as an unwarranted encroachment upon the rights of the public in the highway, and while the high rate of speed results in many deaths and accidents of less serious nature, its great utility has gradually induced a change in the sentiment which once existed against it, so that at the present time complaints are rarely heard, although cars are continually running through the streets of this and nearly every community at a rate of speed in excess of the statutory limit."

BURGESS GAVE UP SWIM.

DOVER, Eng., Aug. 10.—T. W. Burgess started from the coast guard station at Lydden, four miles northwest of this port, in another attempt to swim across the channel. Burgess got within four miles of the French Coast when the strong current commenced to carry him back, compelling him to give up the attempt. He left the water at 8:45.

WATER SPORTS CARNIVAL ON LAKE ASQUAM

HOLDERNESS, N. H., Aug. 10.—The fifth annual water carnival will be held on Lake Asquam on August 18, and the events promise to be of greater interest than ever.

The water sports will begin at 2:30, and in the evening there will be a parade of flotilla and fireworks. If rain prevents the card of sport will be carried over a day.

The sports will include boys' four-oared boat race, ladies' four-oared boat race, men's four-oared boat race, four blade canoe race, two blade canoe race, single blade canoe race, boys' two-blade canoe race, tub race, boys' swimming race, fifty yards men's swimming race, 100 yards boys' relay swimming race, men's relay swimming race, diving contest, tilting contest, launch race, handicap, exhibition event, parade of decorated launches, display of illuminated canoes and rowboats.

The events are held under the auspices of the N. E. A. A. U., and entries close with Dr. H. F. Day, Harvard engineering camp, on August 14.

The general committee in charge of the water sports consist of the most prominent Summer residents, including Colonel J. H. Colt, Jr., Rev. Lorin Webster, Edwin De Merritte, Dr. O. W. Huntington, Dr. W. T. Talbot, Henry F. Door, W. Percy Van Ness, F. G. Webster, Dr. F. E. Schubmehal, H. J. Coolidge, Professor H. J. Hughes, Dr. J. M. Cheny, F. J. Pease, Ora A. Brown, Thomas Osborne, Dr. H. F. Day.

HUB TEAMS AGAINST N. Y.

New Yorks vs. Boston for the motor-paced championship will be settled at the Revere track on Saturday night, and two of the strongest Hub riders in MacLean and Stinson, will be picked to meet McFarland and Bedell, who represent the finest that Gotham can show on the track.

The event will be decided in ten mile heats, the winners meeting and the losers trying conclusions, making forty miles of riding before the final winner is declared.

A large crowd from Lynn will be at the track to see Elmer Collins ride against A. W. McDonald in a ten-mile race behind the motors for the amateur champ.

By putting up a prize for the leader of the most number of laps in the five-mile amateur race it will be a continual speed contest for the riders to be at the head on each circuit.

MYOPIA THIRD BEATEN.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 10—The Albany Polo Club first team defeated the third team of the Myopia Club of Hamilton, Mass., by a score of 16 to 8. The Albany Club was allowed a handicap of eight goals and this proved too much of a lead for the Massachusetts players. By defeating Myopia the Albany Club wins the Grand Union Hotel cup, as this was the final match for that trophy under the auspices of the Saratoga Polo Club.

BLACK FITZ TO MEET GUNTHER

Black Fitzsimmons, the Hartford middleweight, is doing light work on the road at Newburyport in anticipation of a match as soon as the fall bouts begin.

At present he has a boxing school and is instructing the lovers of the manly art down in the quaint shore town how to handle their fists.

He expects to meet George Gunther early in September at Lawrence and says that he will stop the Kangaroo inside the limit.

The colored fighter is showing more cleverness than at any time during his career and will be ready for some hard battles when the boxing season starts up.

HIGHLANDERS SIGN PAINE

Special to the Boston American.

WORCESTER, Aug. 10.—Herbert B. W. Paine, the star twirler of the Whitinsville baseball team, has been signed by the New York American League team. Paine is a resident of Whitinsville, where he was graduated with the high school class of 1904. He was the star twirler on the high school team last year and pitched the team to twenty-one victories and lost but two games. Last year he attended Williston Seminary, where he made good with the baseball squad and pitched his team to victory in more than a few games when the team was pitted against fast college teams of the country. Paine says that he was induced by Pitcher Jack Chesbro of the New York American League team to sign with the Highlanders for next year. He has a wide circle of friends throughout the country, who are all anxious to see him make good in fast company.

Champs Have Hit the Grade

A few remarks on baseball by "Daffy" Moran, inscribed

BY JACQUES FUTRELLE.

Say, Beau, ain't nothin' to it now. The Champs are going some;
They've grabbed the bit and started up the pike,
Just hittin' high spots on the grade, and not them very much,
And playin', son, a game that's something like.
Beat 'em! Say, them other muts, they couldn't beat a drum,
The Champeens are superlatively IT.
Just listen to me holler, son. We win the rag—a cinch—
If only this here pipe o' mine stays lit.

Say, Beau, Jim Collins ain't the cheese! Oh, no, of course he ain't!
He don't know nothin' 'bout the game at all.
Hobe Ferris, too, can whang it some and break the back field fence,
And knock the bloomin' peelin' off the ball.
Run bases! Say, they run so fast the wind is all sliced up.
Them other teams is got a chance—Oh, NIT.
Just paste it in yer hat, my son, the pennant sure for us—
If only this here pipe o' mine stays lit.

Say, Beau, I know we started wrong and beat it down the slide,
And looked all on the blink for quite a spell,
But now the air brake's caught the wheel the Champs 'll keep it up,
Them other dubs 'll never git a smell.
Hot! Well, say, we are so warm that mustard is a frost,
And now we've got the gait we'll never quit.
I tell yer it's a cincherino to cop the Champeenship—
If only this here pipe o' mine stays lit.

HUNT CLUBS WILL FORM ASSOCIATION

WESTBURY, L. I., Aug. 10.—An interesting project has been launched by wealthy sportsmen in this section of Long Island.

Harry Payne Whitney, Harry S. Page, the noted amateur steeplechase rider; Joseph P. Grace of the Great Neck Racing Association; W. Gould Brokaw, B. Van Horne Vingut, William C. Hayes, Singleton Van Schaick, Eugene S. Reynal, Henry Carnegie Phipps, J. Howland Hunt of Squadron A; S. Osgood Pell, Rene La Montagne, Jr., William C. Hazard of the Rockaway Hunt Club; the Meadow Brook Hunt Club, Morristown Field Club of New Jersey, Whippany River Country Club of Morristown; Berkshire Hunt of Massachusetts, and steeplechase riders and country and hunt clubs all over the country, have been asked to join in a movement to found the American Amateur Steeplechase and Hunt Association.

The plans are thoroughly outlined and seem bound to succeed. So many attractive meetings have been given in the vicinity of New York over the sticks each Fall, and the sport is on such a firm basis, that some governing appellate national body, it is asserted, is needed.

It is proposed to hold a four days' meeting at Morris Park, which has been requested for the purpose, about election day. It is intended to have some of the cleverest amateur riders in America sport silk, and professionals and dealers will be rigidly barred.

The clashing of dates, it is expected, will be prevented by such an association, and many of the hunt clubs which find it difficult to arrange cards owing to the crossing of dates will be relieved by the advent of the new body, which shortly will hold a meeting at some prominent New York hotel, arrange a schedule and give all the clubs an even chance at the dates they desire.

Thomas F. Hitchcock is talked of for the presidency of the new association, which will include in its ranks some of the wealthiest sportsmen in America.

Notes of the Diamond.

Frank Bowerman, the Giants' catcher, admits that his face was slapped the other day by a Brooklyn woman on a ferry boat because he sat down beside her when she was holding the seat for her hubby. The woman said it was an accident.

Von Winkle of Utica, who is considered the best pitcher in the New York State League, may be signed by Brooklyn.

President Comiskey of the White Sox has accepted the challenge hurled at his aggregation by Charlie Murphy for a post season series of games, representing the Chicago Nationals.

John T. Brush, owner of the New York Nationals, declares that he will do all in his power to prevent the proposed amalgamation of the two big leagues. Frank Farrell, president of the New York Americans, is also opposed to the scheme.

* * *

President Johnson of the American League has ordered his umpires to throw out all licorice covered balls they may come in contact with on the field. The leather, when so coated, is supposed to become sticky and make the throwing of "spit" balls impossible.

* * *

Manager Hanlon of Brooklyn is wrothy because McGraw of the New Yorks claims to be the originator of the hit-and-run play which the Giants have used with success on numerous occasions. Hanlon says that the play was an invention of his, and was tried for the first time in 1893 by the Baltimores, which was before McGraw's time.

Special to the Boston Americai

PITTSBURG, Aug. 10.—The Boston tional League team will wind up its se with the Pirates this afternoon. A their games here, the Tenneyites will to Cincinnati, where they will line against Joe Kelley's Reds.

Vic Willis is slated to twirl against Pirates to-day, while it is more than likely that Deacon Phillippe will be on the rubber for the home aggregation.

Willis has faced "P" before in the series, and he shut out the crafty locals, 3 to 0. Willis says he is ready to repeat the performance.

The Bostons have played astonishingly fast ball here. In fact, their playing has been superior to anything seen here this season. The Tenneyites have won two out of four games. The truth is that they were entitled to every one of the games, as they played better ball than the Pittsburgs.

Local fans are furious because the Bostons have been able to win games against their prides, when such a team as the New York Giants fell down badly. Such is the fortune of baseball!

Yesterday's game, which was won by the visitors, to the tune of 5 to 3, was a very dull affair.

Young was on the firing line for the Bostons, and allowed the locals but seven hits. These were made by the bottom of the batting list. Carisch made three hits, Ritchey two, Hillebrand one and Howard one.

O'BRIEN MEETS 'TWIN' TONIGHT

Special to the Boston American.

DAWSON CITY, Aug. 10.—Jac ("Twin") Sullivan of Boston and Jac O'Brien of Philadelphia, aspirants for th middleweight championship, will engage i their fifth fight here to-night. They previously fought a draw here.

In this contest O'Brien will, as in hi past bouts with Sullivan, have a good advantage in weight over the "fighting Irishman of Cambridge," as "Twin" now style himself.

TO HOLD HORSE SHOW IN FALL

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Arrangements have just been completed by the directors of the Horse Fair Association of New York to hold a Fall fair at the Empire City track, Yonkers, beginning on October 9 and continuing six days.

The Madison Square Garden Company has entered into an agreement with the National Horse Show Association to permit no prizes to be offered for show ring competitions in the garden at any other exhibitions than the ones held by the latter organization, and Empire City dates were secured from James Butler, who owns a controlling interest in the Yonkers track.

Premiums aggregating about $15,000 will be offered, the prizes ranging in value from $50 to $300. Instead of confining the exhibition to horses owned by members of the association, as was done at the two fairs held in Madison Square Garden, it has been decided to throw all classes open and let the best horse win.

Trotters, thoroughbreds and hunters will be required to prove their worth on the track as well as in the show ring.

MANY ENTRIES FOR SEA GIRT SHOOT

SEA GIRT, Aug. 10.—Competitors who will take part in the inter-club match which will be shot on Sept. 4 will come here from many different States and represent a great variety of semi-military clubs. An idea may be gained from the entries already received by First Lieutenant Albert S. Jones, secretary of the National Rifle Association. He has not heard from all the clubs expected to take part, but he has a large list of entries.

The clubs that have expressed their intention of entering teams for this match include: Princeton University Rifle Club, Italian Rifle Club of New York, two teams; Warren (Pa.) Rifle Club, Passadena (Cal.) Rifle Club, Zettler Rifle Club, Willow Rifle Club, Chicago; Miles Standish Rifle Club, Portland, Me.; Massachusetts Rifle Association, Walnut Hill Rifle Club, of San Francisco; Corleer Rifle Club of Schenectady, N. Y.; Presque Island Rifle Club of Erie, Pa.; Cleveland (Ohio) Rifle Club, Seventh Regiment Rifle Club of New York; Iowa State Rifle Association, New York State Rifle Association, Maryland State Rifle Association, State Rifle Association of Pennsylvania and the Manhattan Rifle Association of New York.

The interclub match is open to teams of five men from any organization affiliated with the National Rifle Association. It will be shot at 200 yards, ten shots to each man, with any rifle and any ammunition. The first prize will be the championship banner and a gold medal to each member of the winning team and $50 in cash; the second prize will be a silver medal to each member of the team and $25; and the third prize will be a bronze medal and $10.

It was won in 1903 by the Manhattan Rifle and Revolver Association, of New York, with a score of 213; and in 1904 by the Ohio State Rifle Association with a score of 223. Clubs will be allowed to make more than one entry, but no man can shoot on more than one team.

Plans are being completed by the officials of the War Department for the national match, and the officials here can get only an idea of what to expect in the way of attendance from the inquiries that have been received regarding accommodations. Thus far the following States have been heard from definitely: New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Maine, Vermont, District of Columbia, Maryland, United States Marine Corps, United States army, United States navy, North Carolina, South Carolina, Idaho, California, Ohio, Iowa, Kansas, Florida, Wisconsin and Tennessee.

It was announced at first that Illinois would not send a team, as the Governor vetoed the appropriation. However, it has been decided to send a team, and the expense involved will be met by private contributions. Nothing definite has been heard from Minnesota or Michigan. It is believed, however, that both States will be represented.

Advice and Aid to Those in Trouble

By Rev. Albert E. George

UNDER this head, the Rev. Mr. George will gladly advise all who are in any manner of trouble. All letters will be answered as promptly as possible, and will be treated in absolute confidence. Write him if you are in need of aid in solving any of the little difficulties, domestic, marital or legal.

EDITOR TROUBLE COLUMN:

I am a young lady twenty-two years old, and am deeply in love with a young man. He is a widower, but I love him just the same. Before I knew this young man I was going with a young fellow whom my mother thought a great deal of. She is very anxious I should marry him. He dresses a little better and makes a little better appearance, but he has not good principles, nor is he at all religiously inclined. All my friends, except my mother, seem to think it would be a disgrace for me to marry him.

Would you kindly tell me why people think it is a disgrace to marry a widower, and why they think the fellow who smokes and drinks a little and makes a good appearance in society is just lovely?

I don't know whether to go against my relatives and friends and marry the one I dearly love, or marry the other and try to love him. Will you kindly advise me through the AMERICAN? TROUBLED.

Boston.

MARRY, of course, the man you love. In certain instances it may be well to be guided by the counsel of others. In your case this does not apply. The young widower, having good principles, and indicating in other ways his adherence to right things, is worthy of your affection.

The mere fact that others are trying to make a match between you and a young man who happens to make a better appearance should not weigh with you.

It is not a disgrace to marry a widower. There is a queer sentiment running around this world that to marry a widower is getting "warmed over" love.

Do not believe it. Your own love for a man must not be directed by others. There are too many people meddling in love matters. As you are of age, take the whole subject of your love into your own judgment and turn it over carefully, and when you are convinced that you want to marry the man you love, do so notwithstanding the objections of others.

When you try to love a man who pleases your friends, be sure that unhappiness or the divorce court will be the ultimate end of that love.

EDITOR TROUBLE COLUMN:

I am glad to see that the Rev. Mr. George, for whom I have great respect, has undertaken to answer queries in your columns. I am specially interested in the question of "C. A. C." regarding fishing on Sunday. While applauding Mr. George for his liberal and common sense view of the question, I should still like to ask as a corollary to that question, whether in Mr. George's opinion it is a right and manly occupation to sit down by a brook, be it on Sunday or any other day, and take the lives of fish for the mere pleasure of catching them?

When I have seen the fishermen come home Sundays with a pail full of half-dead fish gasping for breath, and seen them taken into the kitchen and skinned alive I have not thought much about the question of what day of the week it might happen to be. It has seemed to me that I would prefer to have some other amusement than this.

Dorchester. MEXMER.

IT seems to be a well-established law that life is perpetuated through the destruction of other types of life. Nature is in a sense cruel. Her whole domain is full of tragedy.

While I respect the conclusions of the writer of this question, has he not carried too far his humanitarianism? How can you escape destroying types of life? The air we breathe, the water we drink, the vegetables we eat contain lower forms of life, and we as human beings are consuming them.

Everyone is fighting microbes. If you draw the line at fishes and comment adversely against the fisherman, why not object to the killing of a flea, as some of the Indian religions do?

I believe there is a wanton destruction of life. Humane ways of taking life for food, should be encouraged. That is as far as we can go. To eliminate from life, the destruction of lower types of life necessitates a complete reversal of natural conditions. I am afraid that the principles of this well-intentioned writer cannot be popularized as long as nature is "red in tooth and claw."

However, let us hope for the reign of better things. We are growing less cruel. Prince Kropotkin has lately argued for the morality of nature. He sees more respect for life among the animals, notwithstanding the methods of the hyena, shrew mouse and man-eating tiger.

All we can expect therefore of human beings is less cruelty toward the animal world. If anything more can come in this line, it will be welcomed. At present, it seems to be the survival of the fittest and nature indorses it.

HOW TO PRESERVE CLOTHES

DRESS of all kinds lasts twice as long when it is well cared for and mended at once when mending is necessary. This is an obvious fact, yet it is astonishing how few people act upon it.

There are numbers of people who find it very difficult to defray the expenses of the wardrobe and who feel it a great trial that clothes wear out as they do, who yet treat the clothes already in their possession without the slightest respect.

They will throw their garments anywhere just as they take them off, or hang them up carelessly without brushing or folding them, then regret their shabbiness.

They will let the garments of one season lie about with the garments of another season, and then excuse themselves for being untidy because they have so little room wherein to bestow their goods. They will leave the doors of the wardrobe wide open all day long, and then wonder that their belongings get dusty. They will hang bodices, coats and mantles by the collar, and skirts by the binding, and then grieve because the fit is ruined. They will scorn the use of an apron when specially dirty work has to be done, and then marvel that the front part of the dress gets spotted.

They will wear the same garment day after day under all circumstances, and then exclaim because a new dress soon loses its freshness. They will keep all odds, ends and nicknacks "knocking about" in one closet or drawer, and then be distressed because they cannot find things that are wanted.

Conduct of this kind is very unreasonable and very extravagant. There is an old proverb which tells us, "A man may be known by the company he keeps."

A witty housekeeper once said that the feminine version of this proverb was, "A woman may be known by the closets she keeps." By this, of course, it was meant that the condition of the wardrobe was somewhat of an index to the character of the owner. Few will deny that this is true.

The care of clothing includes more than brushing it and keeping it in order when not in use. It should be taken care of also when it is being worn. We often hear it said that such-and-such a person "gets through" his clothing twice as fast as another person. This means that he does not take care of it as he should, and so it very soon becomes shabby.

BUYING A HUSBAND FOR $12,000

The Woman Would Be Infinitely Better Off, Single

The Man Who Can Be Purchased Is Worth Nothing

BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A PENNSYLVANIA woman having worked hard most of her fifty years of life, managed to save $12,000.

Having reached a point where she could be comfortably independent for life, she decided that she would like a husband to help her spend her hard-earned fortune.

So she advertised, and, needless to say, she found one.

No woman need despair of finding a mate when she angles with a golden hook.

The husband in this case was young and good-looking.

Now, as a rule, good-looking young men are not marrying middle-aged women unless there is some incentive in the way of riches.

Twelve thousand dollars is a neat little fortune, and this foolish woman could have lived comfortably on it for the rest of her days.

But she craved companionship and the status of a married woman.

All she has left now is the right to write Mrs. instead of Miss before her name.

The fortune and companionship have both disappeared.

Isn't it amazing that a woman who had the brains to accumulate $12,000 should not have the sense to hold it after she got it.

She actually made the whole amount over to her husband, who promptly made off with it.

Think of it, $12,000 for a worthless husband, who would have been an expensive luxury at one-thousandth part the amount.

This woman would have been infinitely better off had she remained single.

Happy married life is the best and highest estate of woman, but unless she marries a man she can respect she had far better remain single.

The poor woman in question had not even the satisfaction of being courted.

She bought her married name.

At fifty years of age she is penniless and obliged to go to work again.

The man told her that he had a fortune of his own, and without attempting in any way to prove the truth of his statements she trustingly laid her fortune at his feet.

He had no money of his own and simply married her to gain possession of hers.

Once he had it in his own hands he left her.

The only way in which this case is unusual is in the size of the sum of money thrown away.

Every day in the week girls are giving their hard-earned money to men.

Perhaps this pathetic little story will be a lesson to some of them and teach them that they must be firm and keep their money for their own future use.

There is another great lesson to be learned from this case, also, and that is the folly of marrying one whom you know little or nothing about.

One would expect a woman of fifty to have too much common sense to advertise for a husband. But some women remain children all their lives.

In any marriage there is a great risk as to whether it will turn out happily, but when it comes to marrying a perfect stranger, the risk is tenfold.

In the first place, the kind of man who would marry a woman for the sake of her money could not be worth anything.

Far better be a happy old maid than an unhappy wife.

Marry the man you love, girls, but know something about him before you marry him.

PEOPLE WHO SHOULD NEVER WED

Young Women

WHERE the young woman married is the young woman marred—to paraphrase a well-known saying—in the greater majority of instances she has only herself to blame.

Matrimony is not the raison d'etre of every woman on the earth, only—unfortunately for herself and her husband—woman does not realize this until after the fetters of wedlock have been forged beyond the power of human aid to break.

One type of girl by whom marriage should be avoided is the girl with an ambition—the girl who, feels she was destined for some other and loftier calling than superintending the details of a household, guiding and guarding the frailties of a nursery, and generally caring for and comforting an ofttimes disagreeable, worried man.

Where an ambitious girl consents to marry, the promise is nearly always won by a lover's vow that his shall be the strong man's hand to help her woman's strength along the difficult road to fame.

She marries, and finds in place of the aiding hand and inspiring love of promise either active opposition or passive indifference to her life-work.

She soon realizes, with an anguish of bitterness, that the man wanted a helpmate for himself, her life and its individual interests playing no part in his.

Then she has either to forsake ambition, or else pursue a path to fame that marriage has rendered a thousandfold steeper and more difficult by raising on every hand obstacles to success.

Young Men

THE man imbued with that popular fallacy which avers that the income which barely suffices to keep one will finance two and a possible third is one of the many men who ought to keep single.

His ideas are purely selfish, for marriage with him means that the wife will either be forced to supplement his slender resources herself, or else consent to drudge morning, noon and night to make two impossible ends meet.

Another man who ought to keep single is he who holds the opinion that marriage is a kind of partnership, wherein the contracting parties should equally share all financial and other responsibilities.

These views spell misery, writ large; for invariably his share, as far as financial responsibilities are concerned, dwindles exactly in proportion as he finds his wife willing and capable of meeting the additional demands made upon her pocket.

Respect for him vanishes, carrying with it all the love and romance of courtship days. Thus both lives are ruined.

The gourmand is yet another type of man for whom singleness is bliss.

The best intentioned, most devoted wife in the world soon wearies of the man whose sole interest in life is centred on menus.

She feels intellectually superior, and woe enters into that household as a consequence.

WORK IS A GOOD TONIC FOR WOMEN

OF course, one does not expect the stout woman to play tennis or to run races, but there are many forms of exercise in the open air which are both beneficial and amusing.

For instance, a game of golf will take a woman far afield, and she will have wandered several miles almost unconsciously from one end of the links to the other.

Croquet, too, has been revived with much success, and this will give a woman the opportunity of mild exercise in the open air.

All useful work, no matter of what kind it may be, strengthens the controlling powers of the mind and invigorates the will.

The performance of any task which is not really in accord with the mood of the moment demands the expenditure of sufficient will power to overcome that mental inertia or sluggishness of which laziness is the natural expression.

But in work, as in all things else, there must be moderation; immoderate work is quite as injurious to the nervous system as no work at all.

Next to useful mental occupation, the pursuit of some hobby, and the consolidating of one's interests in life, a measure of physical exercise is necessary to the health of the nervous system.

Persons of a highly emotional temperament, whose senses are too responsive to the appeals of music, literature, painting and the arts in general should avoid these (to them) unhealthy stimuli, and endeavor rather to find some pursuit which will call into play their highest powers of will and determination.

SCARLET LIES By X and Z, Authors of "Married to Mystery" SCARLET LIES

CHAPTER CXLIV.—Continued

"IF you are prepared, I am willing," he said, after a short pause. "I can trust her to you, Dick."

"Thank you, sir. You shall not find me unworthy of that great trust. But"—his face clouded—"what about Mary? Will she consent?"

"Of course she will," replied the Soap King.

"But I don't want her to know that it is—that it is on account of this business that we are hurrying on the wedding. Do you understand, sir?"

"Of course I understand, my boy," answered the elder man. "And I fully appreciate your most delicate position, and I can never sufficiently thank you—never."

"You see, sir," said Dick Menzies simply, "I'm just head over heels in love with her; she's all my life and world."

"I'm glad," said Armstrong; "more glad than I can ever say."

"But with her it's different," Menzies went on.

"How different?"

For a few seconds the young soldier hesitated. It was an awkward and embarrassing question.

"You see, sir," he blurted out clumsily at last, "with Mary it's very different. She doesn't love me a little bit, at least, not in the way I love her. I'm going to make her in time, but that's quite another matter. Her heart's with poor old Stephen; there's no getting away from it. I only wish I could. She loved him as she will never love any other man in all her life; she still loves him, she is quite honest about it, too. Don't make any mistake on that score."

Armstrong looked very grave. In his heart of hearts he knew only too well that the young soldier was speaking the truth, though he would fain have had it otherwise.

"In time," he said, "you will see it will be all right."

"Of course it will," responded Dick Menzies enthusiastically. "You don't for a moment, sir, imagine that I doubt that; but the immediate question is, will Mary object to this hurried marriage?"

"Of course she won't," said Armstrong. "If she has to marry you—to put it bluntly—the sooner it's over the better will she be pleased, you'll see. So make all your arrangements; and, as far as I am concerned, and the marriage settlements and all that, leave that to me. I'll have all that arranged."

"Is It Possible," exclaimed Dick Menzies, with a radiant smile lighting up his handsome, bronzed face, "that Mary will really be my wife so soon?"

"As far as I am concerned," answered the Soap King, "the sooner the better."

So it was arranged; and in his joy at the prospect of so soon having Mary Armstrong for his wife, and in the innumerable arrangements concerning the wedding, Menzies almost forgot all about Morley Darch and his sinister secret.

It was mutually agreed between Armstrong and his prospective son-in-law that, as far as was possible, the arrangements should be kept a secret, so that the first intimation Morley Darch should have of the marriage would be an announcement in the newspapers that it had actually taken place, and that the happy pair had left for Switzerland to spend their honeymoon.

Those days, however, told terribly on Armstrong. True, he went about his business, and he had much to do. He went to Port Cleno and transacted some business there, and returned to Boston, where he was busy from early morning till late at night.

He had ascertained that Morley Darch was in Europe, though he was unable to obtain his address. He also found that Fergus Braine was abroad. Their combined absence puzzled him, and their silence—particularly that of Fergus Braine—appeared to him to be most ominous.

Yet nothing happened. The sword of Damocles still hung over his head—but did not fall.

Telegraphic communication was established with the yacht Seafoam at Gibraltar, and the news came that all was well. Dick Menzies cabled Mary his love, and she answered Dick that she looked forward to seeing him again very soon.

The Seafoam made a good passage from Gibraltar in very fair weather, and was signalled twelve hours ahead of her time on her return.

Armstrong and Menzies went down together to meet her.

All arrangements were complete and the strictest secrecy had been observed. The marriage was to take place to-morrow.

"I wonder what Mary will say?" said Menzies.

Armstrong was asking himself the same question. Yes, what would Mary say? An engagement was one thing, actual marriage, binding and irrevocable, was quite another thing.

Meantime, quite unconscious of all the plans which had been made by her father and her lover for her future, Mary Armstrong leaned over the taffrail of the Seafoam, and gazed dreamily into the blue water, thinking of Stephen, who was dead—always Stephen.

CHAPTER CXLV.

The Resolve of Mary.

THE meeting of Mary Armstrong and Dick Menzies was peculiarly reminiscent to the girl of a meeting under very similar circumstances, and under precisely the same environment: only then it had been Winter, and now it was Summer. But it had been Summer in her heart then, whereas now it was chill Winter.

Dick Menzies met her now—met her just as Stephen had done then, as her lover and fiance. But how different it was—how very different!

And yet the whole thing was so extremely reminiscent. Just as they had done then, so they did now. Menzies said almost the same words to her as Stephen had said; there was the same trill in his voice, the same light in his eyes. It was almost uncanny.

They had dined on the Seafoam, just as they had done on that other occasion, and Dick Menzies had escorted his fiancee into the palatial dining room, and sat between her and Miss Judith Mort, just as Stephen had done.

Mary had been intensely relieved at seeing her father in such good spirits, though she could not help noticing the lines of haunting anxiety around his kindly gray eyes and on his high, broad forehead.

"So far, little girl," he had whispered in her ear, as he had kissed her his welcome home—"so far, everything is all right. Don't worry. We are going to pull through, I hope. Keep your courage up, and—take an early opportunity of having a chat with Dick. He's a brick, my girl—a regular, downright brick!"

"I know he is, father," she said. But there was doubt and mistrust and questioning in her look and tone.

"He'll make you a good husband, Mary," he said. "I'm sure he will; and you will be as happy as you deserve to be."

"I hope so, father—I hope so, for your sake."

"For my sake? Pshaw! For your own sake, my child!"

She smiled sadly, for she knew that happiness was not for her, and that the life had long ago gone out of her young life, when grim Death had stepped in and robbed her of the one man who was everything on earth to her—light and life and love and all!

"I'm so glad to see you again, Dick," she said, quite unaffectedly, when at last she found herself separated from the others and alone with him.

He devoured her with a long, lingering gaze of admiration and passion and possession.

"My love!" he murmured—"my love and my life—

My Wife That is to Be!"

She winced, and a shadow crossed her lovely face; but the man, in the ardor of his devotion and great love, did not notice it. Already she was his. He almost persuaded himself that she loved him. Surely such love as his must light the latent love in her!

"What ages you have been away!" he went on, taking possession of her dainty hand. "And how I have missed you, my Mary!"

"And I have missed you, too, Dick," she bravely made an effort to say. But somehow or other her words did not ring true, although, as a matter of fact, she had missed him very much indeed—far more than perhaps she herself knew.

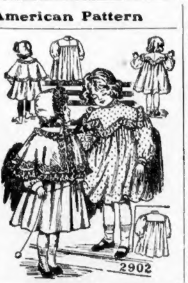
Hearst's Boston American Pattern

An Outfit for the Little Miss



No. 2,902—The garments for the little people are a bewildering array of daintiness, and so exquisite are the fabrics provided for these that they are a delight to fashion. Here is a little dress of dotted mull with the sheerest of embroidery finishing the pointed yoke. The coat is made of white linen, adorned with appliqued embroidery and a ruffle of the same. The deep collar adds much to the finish and style of the coat, but for ordinary wear it may be omitted. The tiny bonnet is of India mull, edged with a narrow ruche of the same material. For a medium size, the dress requires 1⅞ yards of 36-inch material, the coat 2⅞ yards, and the bonnet ¼ yard.

Pattern No. 2,902 is in four sizes, ½, 1, 2 and 4 years.

50 JUBILEE SINGERS FOR PARAGON PARK

Holders of Boston American's Free Tickets Will Enjoy the Great Show.

WILL APPEAR NEXT WEEK

A real old-fashioned Darkey Jubilee is coming to Paragon Park, Nantasket Beach, next week.

It is called "The South Before the War."

Paragon Park patrons will notice the two adjectives, "old-fashioned" and "darkey."

This is not the usual modern style of "coon" entertainment. It is the real "befo' de wah" article. The entertainers are genuine Southern darkeys, fifty of them, from the land of Dixie. No burnt cork and blackface make-up for them. They don't need it. For, like the lady in the song, they:

"Am not cullud, dey'se bawn dat way"

The Paragon Park management has been to great expense to secure this feature and has made elaborate preparations for it. The entire ground space hitherto occupied by the Wild West Show has been allotted to it. A large platform has been erected and the necessary accessories have been provided.

The "South Before the War" will be a continuous performance. An admission allows you to go in and stay as long as you like. And you will like it all.

The darkeys will reproduce the life on the old plantations. They will sing the old-fashioned negro melodies, which are very melodious. They will dance the old time dances, the "Buck and Wing," the "Pigeon Toe," "Mobile Buck," the "Buzzard's Lope" and such time-honored darkey steps. They will show you just how the "befo' de wah" darkey used to enjoy himself.

The entire production is new and novel. Managements of several amusement enterprises have tried to secure it, but it is coming to Paragon Park. In all its features it is an unusually high-class entertainment, and the park management feels fortunate in having secured it.

"The South Before the War" is one of the shows to which the BOSTON AMERICAN will give away free tickets next week.

WOMAN'S LIFE SAVED BY HAIR

Mrs. Elsie Cheney, a Society Favorite, Dragged from Jaws of Death.

Frank S. Maloney of Winthrop made his second rescue this season at Winthrop Beach when he saved Mrs. Elsie Cheney, a society favorite, from death in the waves off Myrtle avenue.

Mrs. Cheney and a friend were playing ball and enjoying themselves on the beach, Maloney and a number of others looking on. Tiring of the sport, Mrs. Cheney ran into the water, and began to swim for the raft moored about 100 feet out. As she is an expert swimmer nobody thought anything of her swim, until she was about three-quarters of the way to her goal, when she suddenly called loudly for help.

The crowd on the beach thought she was trying to have a little fun with them, but Maloney saw that the woman was really in need of assistance, and jumped into the water. He is a powerful swimmer, and reached the woman as she was going down for the last time. He grabbed her by the hair and dragged her body to the beach, where willing hands carried her to a nearby house, where she was resuscitated.

Mrs. Cheney is one of the best known summer residents at the beach, and is extremely popular. Those who witnessed her rescue by Maloney have nothing but admiration for the young man, and talk of applying for a medal for him from the Humane Society.

HUB MAN WINS BELLE OF TEXAS

MAGNOLIA, Aug. 10.—Society at the Oceanside Hotel is much interested in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Mona House, the belle of Texas, and Randolph Tucker of Boston and Manchester. These young people have known each other less than a month, becoming engaged July 28, after an acquaintance of two weeks. The wedding will be about December 20 in Boston.

Miss House is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. House, the wealthiest and one of the most exclusive families in Austin, Tex. She is one of the most attractive girls on the North Shore, and in Texas has no rival. Last Summer, when in England with her mother, Miss House was presented at the drawing room of King Edward and the Queen.

Mr. Tucker is the only son of William T. Tucker, a Boston banker, whose town house is at No. 47 Bay State road.

He is about twenty-five years old. He entered Harvard at nineteen, but left college in his freshman year to go abroad. Upon his return three years ago he started out alone in his financial career, entering the bond house of Vermilye & Co., on Congress street, where he has climbed from the position of office boy to a notch next to the head of the firm.

LIFE SAVED BY HIS FINGER RING

WINSTED, Ct., Aug. 10.—A finger ring probably saved the life of John Sweeney, a laborer, in Torrington. Sweeney was released from his painful position by trainmen.

BOSTON, MASS., Aug. 9, 1905.

To the Editor of the Boston American:

Dear Sir—We take much pleasure in sending you check for $100 as our contribution towards the Harvard College Scholarship Fund intended to benefit the Newsboys' Union. We know that many men who have achieved success and risen to high positions in the commercial world were once newsboys, and we consider their desire to keep up this good record by contributing the first $100 themselves to this cause very commendable. By all means let us educate as far as we can the coming generations, and we cannot find more likely material to develop into useful manhood than among the membership of this union.

Very truly yours,

Yesterday's contributions through the BOSTON AMERICAN to the fund to establish a scholarship at Harvard College for the Newsboys' Union of Boston, swelled the total amount received to $1,632.

It is noted with great satisfaction in the Newsboys' Union and elsewhere that the small contributions are beginning to come in. Those of yesterday will serve to encourage the multitude of light contributors waiting their turn to show their friendliness to the small army of newsboys of Boston.

Sums of every denomination will be welcomed by the union in the full spirit in which they are donated. It is realized by these bright youngsters that it costs as great an effort for some to give a dollar as for others to give large sums.

Even those who give small sums will be able to feel that they assisted in putting the newsboys through college. The opportunity is now afforded for all of these to be represented, the ice being broken by the gifts of Mr. A. Mendelsohn and Mr. Joseph Green of the New England Construction Company.

It is urged that next to being first in this matter is being prompt, because the example of an early giver is thought to make his gift ofttimes of double value.

The time seems now at hand for the making of a multitude of the small donations until every street and neighborhood is represented in this very novel and earnest plan to establish a Harvard scholarship for the Newsboys' Union of Boston.

JUST TO DIE IN FIERY FURNACE

NORTH ADAMS, Aug. 10.—James Rumbolt, after being arested on a charge of arson in connection with a fire at the weave shop of the Arnold Print Works on Monday night, confessed to the police that he set the fire, and said that he did it because he wanted to die in a "fiery furnace" on account of family troubles.

Rumbolt was employed in the boiler room of the print works, and the police believe that he was in the weave shop at the time of the fire. The blaze set off the sprinkler system and the fire was easily extinguished by the local department.

BURRAGE READY TO FACE SUITS

A. C. Burrage, who, with Thomas W. Lawson, has been accused of breaking faith in the matter of selling Copper Range stock, which it is charged was not to be sold for over a year, defies those who made the charges to bring action against him in the courts if they consider he has done what he should not have done.

The defiance comes from the office of Mr. Lawson, on the same sheet in which he explains his failure to give out the inside of the Copper Range deal, which he promised in his statement of Tuesday night. The Lawson-Burrage statement is as follows:

"Owing to the labor and time connected with the physical unwinding of the Copper Range skein which the pussy cat tangled up yesterday during its two hours' play, I will not be able to compile the interesting data I promised to publish until to-morrow.

"Mr. A. C. Burrage authorizes the following:

"'If any firm or corporation considers I have violated any agreement with them, they are at liberty to bring suit immediately to test such violation.'

"THOMAS W. LAWSON."

The most interesting feature of the case to many is the placing of Mr. Lawson in the same boat with Mr. Burrage of the Standard Oil group, which Lawson has been so severely attacking. In these attacks he has not spared Mr. Burrage, and the street, marvelling at his defence of Burrage, wonder if his forthcoming statements will explain when he and Burrage made up.

HOKEY-POKEY MAN HAD $300

The police of station 9 arrested James Crest, a Greek, peddling ice cream from a cart without a license, and when they made the customary search they got the surprise of their lives.

He was loaded with money. In every pocket they found bills. They were all of small denominations, and when they were laid on the desk they made a very respectable pile. Crest wore a belt, and this, too, was lined with money. In all, the hokey-pokey man had more than $300, of which $250 was in greenbacks and the remainder in gold. He was unable to speak English, so an interpreter was called in, through whom the pedler was bailed.

YEAR IN JAIL FOR TYING WIFE TO BED

FALL RIVER, Aug. 10—Peter McDonald will spend one year in jail for tying his wife to the bed, putting a noose about her neck and falling across her body dead drunk. He remained there for four hours before his wife was able to free herself. Talk among neighbors led to an investigation. McDonald thought it was a great joke and laughed sarcastically until sentence was imposed.

LYNN STRIKES END.

LYNN, Aug. 10.—The strikes of the lasters in the Faunce & Spinney shoe factory and of edgemakers in the Eagle Shoe Company have been settled, the men returning to work after a week's idleness on terms accepted by the union.

SUMMER AMUSEMENTS.

Keith's Theatre

Dixon, Bowers and Dixon, in an eccentric comedy and acrobatic specialty are scoring a big laughing hit at Keith's this week. To see the funny antics of a dumb man trying to communicate with a deaf one never fails to elicit laughter at every performance. Rudolf Horsky, the noted German comedian, and Leon Bergere and company head the vaudeville section of the Keith programme next week.

Colonial Theatre

"The Pearl and the Pumpkin" is playing to big audiences at the Colonial Theatre, and the patronage of the fourth week is even larger than that of those which went before. Its run in this city might well be continued for an indefinite period, but the original plan will be carried out, and a week from Monday New Yorkers will have a chance to see the rural extravaganza.

Tremont Theatre

Few musical plays have scored such a success at the Tremont Theatre as that recorded for "The Geezer of Geck." Following its all season's run in New York George Ade's "The College Widow," will open the regular season at the Tremont a week from Monday, the sale of seats beginning this coming Monday.

Grand Opera House

"The Millionaire Detective," this week's attraction at the Grand Opera House, is one of the first plays on the new theme of "frenzied finance." Next week's attraction will be a new melodrama, entitled, "Dangers of Working Girls."

Empire Theatre

"The Cowboy and the Lady," as played by the Empire Theatre stock company this week has proved a big attraction. The Empire bill for next week will be Henry C. DeMille's romantic melodrama, "The Lost Paradise."

Bowdoin Square Theatre

"The Game of Life" is proving a popular attraction at the Bowdoin Square Theatre. Next week's play will be the old favorite, "Mugg's Landing."

Palace Theatre

Those who like good burlesque and vaudeville will enjoy the splendid bill at the Palace Theatre this week. The burlesques are uproariously funny, while the olio is replete with entertaining specialties.

Austin & Stone's Museum

Big John Middle Sky, the Indian athlete, has proved one of the biggest attractions that has been offered at Austin & Stone's Museum this season. There are plenty of other features, too, and a good vaudeville programme in the theatre.

Paragon Park

The free open-air circus bill at Paragon Park this week is one of the best of the season. It includes the Zoellers, a remarkable troupe of trapeze performers; Folk and Tresk, European acrobats and head balancers, and Forber, the king of wire walking jugglers.

Point of Pines

The vaudeville programme in the Pines Theatre this week includes Brindamour, the handcuff king; Mme. Schell, the lady lion tamer; Gracie Emmett and her company in their funny farce; Will Dockray, monologist, and Miss Crosby, with her illustrated songs.

Norumbega Park

The musical comedy, "Mr. Planet from Mars," is being presented in the covered open air theatre at Norumbega Park every afternoon and evening this week. It is given by an excellent company and there is plenty of catchy music.

Lexington Park

The vaudeville programme in the rustic theatre at Lexington Park this week comprises C. W. Littlefield, Hayman and Franklin, Eckert and Berg, Spaulding brothers and Lizzie Daly and company.

Nantasket by Steamer

The Nantasket steamers, which leave Rowe's wharf once an hour for the sail down the harbor to the famous resort, have been carrying great crowds this season. The sail down and return is an attractive feature of a day at the shore.

To Pilgrim Town

At Plymouth may be seen the rock on which the passengers of the Mayflower landed nearly three centuries ago, besides many other relics of the forefathers. The steamer Old Colony leaves Rowe's wharf daily and Sundays.

Provincetown Trip

The trip to the tip of the Cape consumes four hours each way, with one hour and a half sojourn at Provincetown for dinner and stroll about the quaint and historic old seaport.

Bass Point

Steamers sail from Lincoln Wharf direct to Bass Point, Nahant, where the number of attractions have never been so many as now. There are theatre, dance hall, free band concerts, new athletic field and seashore pastimes.

OX-POWER FOR BOSTON AUTO

NARRAGANSETT PIER, Aug. 10.—Gordon Smith's wrecked automobile was towed into town by a pair of Rhode Island oxen.

Smith, who lives in Boston, met Warren Kinney, son of Francis S. Kinney of New York, on Boston Neck road in an automobile.

They attempted to pass each other on a sharp curve and on the same side of the road. Both automobiles were disabled by the accident. Hailing a farmer, Smith secured a pair of oxen and a farm hand to take his wrecked car to a Pier garage.

THE LATEST DISCOVERY

Which Revolutionizes the Art of Photography

Mr. Frank E. Barentzen, the discoverer of a process which is destined to revolutionize the methods now in vogue and in general use by photographers for producing high-class work and reproducing portraits, landscapes, paintings, etchings and every kind and degree of photography, is well known as a photographic artist and student of process work.

His first success was achieved in 1880 with the Albatype, a gelatine process, at Martinique. After resigning his office of Consular at that port, he came to Boston in 1885. He kept up the study of his profession, and having a varied and extended knowledge of the different ways and means of acquiring results from the many processes known to the photographic profession, he observed their incompleteness and the dependence for their success on the manufacture of the many chemically prepared papers. He realized that there was a possibility by changed conditions to obtain greater results in a more simple and economically commercial manner, and he set to work to find a way to practically verify his ideas. After continuous experimenting and the expenditure of a large sum of money and unceasing labor for sixteen years, HIS EFFORTS WERE AT LAST CROWNED WITH SUCCESS.

What Edison is to the electrical world, Barentzen is to the world of photography. Added to the honor bestowed upon him by the Venezuelan government of a decoration for his assistance to the eminent French explorer, Chaffanzon, and the conferring of a diploma of honor from the French government for photographic skill, must now come the praises of every professional and amateur photographer of the world FOR HIS LAST GREAT ACCOMPLISHMENT.

His discovery has made practically commercial a simple and economic method with ease of certainty, weather conditions not excepted, TO MAKE A REPRODUCTION ON METAL FROM START TO FINISH WITHOUT OUTSIDE AID.

The Barentzen process has been purchased by the American Mezzo-Tint Company of Malden, Mass., where Mr. Barentzen has been in business for the past sixteen years, being patronized and indorsed by patrons of high-class special work who recognize his acknowledged skill. The American Mezzo-Tint Company is capitalized for $100,000, under Massachusetts laws, par value $5 per share, full paid and nonassessable.

The company is doing business and has a large number of orders to fill. To increase present facilities, immediate capital is desired, and a limited number of shares of stock are now offered at $5 per share, par value, the right being reserved to cancel any subscription in excess of the amount set aside for this purpose. Considering the work in hand and the great demand for the same by this process, the profits will be enormous.

DIVIDENDS MAY BE ASSURED AT NOT LESS THAN 10 PER CENT. PER ANNUM, PAYABLE JAN. 1, 1906. EXPERT INVESTIGATION CORDIALLY SOLICITED.

The Woman, the Children, the Two Dead Horses

A Sweet Little Corner of Our "Perfect Civilization"

It was very hot in New York yesterday morning.

The sun beat down on the stone pavement of James slip so vigorously that the bare-footed children walked on the outer edges of their feet, painfully, and the old women taking care of babies in the doorways looked more withered and sorrowful than usual.

At the corner of James slip and Water street a man was hammering violently on a huge copper vat about six feet in diameter. He was knocking out the rivets with a cold chisel.

Just off James slip, on the west side of Water street, a woman sat bare-headed in the hot sun.

Her hair, half gray, fell loosely about her head. The head hung loosely from the neck, the lips of the mouth seemed loose and uncontrolled. Her eyes were dull, and in them there was no emotion save slight apprehension.

Dazed as she was, the fear of cruel children and heartless men caused her to look around vaguely, timidly, from time to time.

She wore an old black cloak, quite heavy, and a heavy blue skirt. She will be wearing the same in Winter—if, unfortunately, she lives until then.

Her shoes were patched, her hands, like her face, were wrinkled prematurely.

It was a good face, one that had been intelligent, the face of a woman that would have done her duty only too gladly if the world had let her.

The man's violent hammering on the copper vat only a few feet away she barely heard. She looked toward the noise for a moment, wiping the hair from her forehead in a perplexed way, then looked down again.

For the time at least the alcohol poison that she had drunk mercifully wiped out the din, the filth of the unkempt street, and the fire of the hot sun—as it will wipe out her life one day.

A few yards from there—less than a half block up James slip—outside the stables of the American News Company, two dead horses lay in the gutter. A two-horse van, with a windlass to hoist them, had come to get the corpses of these poor, dead soldiers of industry.

One horse was black, one was bay.

Along the sidewalk, as close to the horses as they could get, stood a row of more than twenty children of all sizes and complexions. Some were barely big enough to toddle. There were boys and girls feasting their eyes on the only excitement within reach.

A chain was fastened around the neck of the black horse, the windlass creaked, very slowly the swollen body was dragged into the wagon for dead horses.

As it moved, a barefooted boy with red hair jumped upon the horse's body and balanced himself proudly as it was hauled up the incline.

Filth was in the gutters and in the air.

After a while, the wagon took the two dead horses, a policeman took the drunken woman, causing an excitement that pleased the children for a few moments.

Then they settled down to watch the man hammer his copper vat. The pleasure of the day was over.

It is not a very pretty story—not the kind of a picture that you would seek. Poets don't write of such things, and artists don't paint them.

But it would be well if the lucky inhabitants of the world, those that make the laws to suit themselves, and spend the public money to suit themselves, could see that side of life, and understand it.

How does society treat that wretched woman?

While she still has a chance it cares nothing for her, DOES NOTHING FOR HER.

She may be wretchedly poor when her children are born, no one helps her.

She may be married to a brute that ill treats her, nobody is there to encourage or protect her.

If she works for her wretched living, any man is permitted to grind her, and overwork her, and underpay her as he pleases.

Not a finger is lifted to save the poor creature from her inevitable fate. There is no hand stretched out toward her.

Alcohol offers her rest for a moment and worse punishment later on. She takes the rest.

Then, when the woman sinks down on the public street, when her pride is broken, and a shame that she cannot ever live down has come upon her, SOCIETY IS ALL READY FOR HER.

There is a well-paid, well-dressed policeman to take her away.

There is a better-paid, better-dressed judge to send her to prison—with the cynically humorous option of a fine.

An expensive prison is ready.

Society opens its arms and says to the woman:

> While you were sober, hard-working, struggling, sacrificing yourself for children, we would do nothing for you.
> Now you are drunk; your life is ended, your hope is gone; we are ready to take you in; we have bed and board and care to give you.

And how about the children that stand and watch the swollen dead horses, because they have nowhere to go, nothing to do?

The taxes that should go for playgrounds are stolen, or spent to keep scrupulously clean the uptown streets, whose inhabitants are all in the country.

Those that have charge of their education begrudge them the teaching that would at least partly counteract the deficiencies of street life and give them a chance to make up for their wretched home surroundings.

Such men are indignant that money should be spent to develop the imaginations and the possibilities of these poor children. Their own children are at private schools, and they think that the "Three R's"—Reading, Writing and Arithmetic—are good enough for these poor little outcasts of humanity.

How brutal is the feeling of unimaginative men toward these children, whose only hope is in the public conscience!

> Let them learn their Three R's in the school. That is enough to make some of them clerks for us, the others we will take care of in prison.
> Let them play in the gutter and the filth, or watch dead horses for amusement. There are plenty more babies where they came from.
> We don't want to spoil them by teaching them too much.

That is the attitude of smug, modern society toward the children of the streets. It is the attitude of those who spend the money that is earned by the fathers and mothers of these poor children.

It is the attitude of those that are happy, rich and well fed, thanks to a condition of society that could not last one second except for the marvellous patience and endurance of the wretchedly poor.

Well may the unimaginative and ignorant, and the selfishly, schemingly cunning managers of civilization keep education from these poor children as long as they can.

Educate them, teach them as they should be taught, and when they grow up they will determine that they will not be like those two dead horses, worked to death, and then hauled off to the grave like carrion.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

She Points Out That There Are Greater Themes Than War for the Poets of These Latter Days

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1905, by American-Journal-Examiner.

A READER of this column sends me some data and asks me to write a poem on recent battles between Russia and Japan. He thinks the theme an inspiring one.

All my sympathies have been with Japan in this horrible and disgraceful war.

Russia is a land of cruelty and oppression, and doubtless nothing but its own bloodthirsty methods could help it to better conditions.

Any country which endeavors to keep its people in ignorance must give way before the march of progress.

Ignorance, oppression, cruelty—all must go.

Knowledge, Liberty and Kindness must come to replace them.

It will be a long time before the transformation takes place, yet God's edict has gone forth and must be obeyed.

Co-operation, Fellowship, Brotherhood, Socialism, Liberty and Freedom are words one hears on every side these days.

The air is full of admonitions and warnings for those who will listen.

The old things are passing and a new order of things is on the way.

The new order will eliminate war from its methods.

However war may be raging on the earth to-day, it is a waste of time and talent for any poet to make it his theme. The people of the future will not care to read war poems.

War should no longer be dignified by song. It is a disgrace to Christianity, to culture, to education, to progress. It belongs with a decayed era, a worn-out system of government.

There are nobler themes for poets than war.

WHY should the poets of these pregnant times
Be asked to sing of war's unholy crimes?
To laud and eulogize the trade that thrives
On horrid holocausts of human lives?
Man was a fighting beast when earth was young
And war the only theme when Homer sung.
Twixt might and might the equal contest lay,
Not so the battles of our modern day.
Too often now the conquering hero struts,
A Gulliver among the Lilliputs.
Success no longer rests on skill or fate,
But on the movements of a syndicate.
Of old, men fought, and deemed it right and just;
To-day the warrior fights because he must,
And in his secret heart feels shame, because
He desecrates the higher manhood's laws
Oh, there are worthier themes for poet's pen
In this great hour than bloody deeds of men.
The rights of many—not the might of one—
The coming issues, not the battle done.
The awful opulence, the awful need;
The rise of brotherhood, the fall of greed;
The soul of man replete with God's own force—
The cry "to heights" and not the call "to horse!"
Are there not better things in this great age
For pen of poet or for voice of sage
Than those old tales of killing? Song is dumb
Only that greater songs in time may come.

> Chiefly the mould of a man's fortune is in his own hands.

Tom Easy

By James J. Montague

(This Is Not a Fable.)

TOM EASY had a paying job as confidential clerk,
And hoped to get a better one by hard and honest work.
He had a wife and youngster in a cozy Back Bay flat—
They lived on twenty-five a week and were content with that.
His wife was economical, and knew what money meant—
She counted very carefully each dollar that she spent.

Small bills for food and raiment took a part of Tommy's pay;
A part was laid up in the bank against a rainy day.
A part his wife took out each week with fond and wistful joy,
And made a fund to use ere long to educate the boy.
And there was left a little, when vacation time was due,
To take them to the country for a happy week or two.

Tom Easy's office intimates exhorted him to play
A system on the ponies when they ran at Sheepshead Bay.
He didn't like the thing at first, but thought it over when
The chief clerk won a hundred on a bet of eight or ten.
"I might as well bet, too," he thought, "and add a little more
To my small funds—it surely seems worth taking chances for."

A part of Tommy's money went to form a little pool,
Enough—if it but won—to help to send the boy to school;
A part went into useful tips from touts about the track,
Who somehow knew the very horse that Tommy ought to back.
A part he kept in pocket for the snaps that came along,
To make up for small losses if his judgment should go wrong.

The rent is due on Tommy's flat, and at the grocery store
They've told his wife they cannot give her credit any more.
And Tommy's bright-eyed little son, his father's one-time joy,
Is "helping out" by working as half-paid office boy.
Tom's wife is thin and heavy-eyed, but sadly toils away
To make one dollar do for ten, while Tom's at Sheepshead Bay.

A part of Tommy's money goes to buy the bookies wine
When they invite Nan Pattersons along Broadway to dine.
A part buys crooks and thugs and thieves their after-dinner beer,
Or helps to pay some jockey boy a fortune every year.
A part—and far the largest part—is neatly piled in stacks
With which the kindly Jockey Club will build a few more tracks.

Tom Easy's bound to land in jail, his former friends declare—
But how about the Jockey Club? Who dares to send them there?
